Alex and Phyllis Eisenstein are continuing their project to put together a book of classic science-fiction art by Ed Emshwiller (who often signed his work "Emsh") – with the permission of his wife and heir, Carol Emshwiller.

"Though many fine cover originals are in hand or accessible," Alex wrote me recently, "I'm still avidly seeking more of these, because many of his best such works are still unlocated. Good black-and-white interior art by Emsh is in short supply, so news of these pieces is also very welcome." Contact them at 6208 N. Campbell, Chicago, IL 60659, or phone (312) 274-7064. They're also trying to locate former Galaxy Publisher Robert M. Guinn or his heirs. Can anyone help?

Brent Frankenhoff has just informed me that it hurts like hell when you run the brayer over your thumb. I take this to mean that he has just mashed his thumb with the small hand roller used to mash the waxed galleys onto the layout sheets so that the type sticks to the page.

Which all goes to demonstrate that – even if readers never fully notice the difference when we go to full-page layouts on our new typesetting equipment (which is hooked up but which only recently was set to receive material from the old system or get output in proofs or film) – we'll all be a lot happier.

We've received some inquiries from comic-book publishers whose entries did not make the deadline for #1138, the publisher's issue. We reassured them that material could still be entered for inclusion in the Comics Buyer's Guide 1996 Annual.

However, we've received enough material that we are planning to run an addendum to #1138 and have scheduled its inclusion in #1142. For one thing, errors in data entry when the Dark Horse listing was entered resulted in the loss of three separate lines.

Missing from the Dark Horse listing were the names of creators who fell between Doug Mahnke's first name and Paul Chadwick's last name, including Evan Dorkin, John Byrne, Art Adams, and Matt Wagner. All were compressed into the single nonexistent creator "Doug Chadwick."

So we plan to rerun that entire listing – with the missing information reinstated.

We have a couple of special issues coming up. Issue #1144 is our Garage Sale issue – set up in response to a number of requests for ongoing attention to material for budget-minded fans of old, neat stuff.

You may have seen house advertisements for "Bargain Bin" ads. These are to run in the Super Trader (do-it-yourself) section in #1144. All comics advertised should have been published before 1980 and should be priced below $10. I have no idea how many of these ads we'll get – but I think it's a great concept. One of my fondest memories of recent years is the evening Don and I spent at a Chicago Comicon. One dealer had brought a few delightful boxes of elderly comics in varying condition priced at a flat $3 each. We bought and bought and bought – and spent the evening reading battered old comics we handed back and forth as we finished. It was exactly the sort of comics-reading sessions we'd both enjoyed as kids.

But I digress.

We'll be running some articles on Fun Old Comics in that issue – and we hope you'll enjoy using the "Bargain Bin" feature (whether you're an advertiser or a potential customer). If we find support for it, you'll see more.

And #1145 is our Halloween issue – which just sort of came together, once the kindly folks at Chaos! came up with the idea of doing a cover. So if you have anything Halloweeny, send it our way as soon as possible.

Stock is seized

Oregon comics shop receives complaint

According to Comic Book Legal Defense Fund Executive Director Susan Alston, more than $10,000 worth of comics, card, and lithographs were seized by Ashland, Ore., authorities from Amazing Tales Comics in late August following a complaint that store owner Erik Piper had furnished obscene materials to minors.

After authorities received a complaint that a juvenile male living in a juvenile shelter had obtained a copy of Verotika from Piper's store, Alston said, they sent a 17-year-old female to the store to purchase a copy of Penthouse Comix. Piper said that when he asked her for identification, she said she was 18 but could not product identification proving it. He said he then allowed her to purchase the magazine on the basis of her statement alone. He added that he was "unclear" how the juvenile male obtained the copy of Verotika, as no one in the store recalled selling a copy to anyone matching the juvenile's description, Alston said.

On Aug. 24, a search warrant was executed on the store looking for "evidence leading to the crime of Furnishing Obscene Materials to Minors." According to the warrant, the evidence could include, but was not limited to, "any picture, photograph, drawing, sculpture, motion picture, film, or other visual representation or image of a person or portion of the human body that depicts nudity, sadomasochistic abuse, sexual conduct, or sexual excitement."

Authorities seized all copies of Heavy Metal, Penthouse Comix, Penthouse Men's Adventure Comix, Satanika, Butterscotch, Click!, Faust, Ramba, and other items, including Olivia calendars.

A formal citation charging Piper with "Furnishing Obscene Material to Minors" was issued with a court appearance scheduled for Sept. 8. The Comic Book Legal Defense Fund is investigating the incident pursuant to determining a course of action.

Hobby Games responds to Capital City/TSR

In the wake of last week's announcement of an exclusive distribution deal between Capital City Distribution and game publisher TSR for distribution of TSR products to comics specialty stores, Hobby Game Distributors President Edward Lukatch issued the following statement Aug. 28:

TSR informs us that the Capital City/TSR agreement has no effect on the Hobby Game/TSR relationship. We are free to sell TSR products to any retailer — comics or otherwise — that wishes to purchase from us.

Games are a restock business. No other comics distributor has demonstrated restock capability. We currently stock 8500 game-related items compared to the few hundred that comics distributors may stock. Any medium-sized game section stocks 1800 items or more.

We have been selling TSR products to retailers for more than 15 years and have periodically created new standards for customer service in the game industry.

We fought for stock numbers, fax machines, and improved graphics on packaging.

We introduced 24-hour shipping, 90%-plus fill rates, and a customer-comes-first attitude.

When we first entered the comics industry years ago, we were widely praised for providing guaranteed reorders on comics — a field that we still lead in.

At Hobby Game, we feel an open and competitive market responds best to retailers' needs.

In my most recent issue of Comics Buyer's G-u-i-d-e, there is a lovely letter from a Mary G-u-i-d-o, as well as reference to g-o-u-d-a cheese. Would it have been too much to ask for equal time?

I just couldn't wait until all four episodes of Courage Incorporated had run to express my support.

I am an "older" (over 50) comics fan with a special love for that now-extinct Sunday pleasure, the full-page adventures strip. While Courage Incorporated is no Prince Valiant, it is fun and well done. Please look into the possibility of continuing the strip.

Just a note regarding Courage Incorporated. I like it and would like to see more. Please pass on my compliments to the creators. I would like more information on Courage Incorporated and where to find it after its brief appearance in CBG.

Thanks and continued success!

[At this point, there are no plans to continue Courage Incorporated in CBG – but, obviously, there is interest in the feature. We'd be glad to forward correspondence to the creators – Jason Caskey, Andrew Walls, and Phil Hester – from interested publishers and admirers.]

For comics, now is the best of times and the worst of times.

Maybe some of you out there are about to drop out of the hobby because of changes that have taken place in what used to be your favorite comic book or changes in the industry itself that are forcing you to take a second look at your first love. Before you leave, let me tell you my story.

To begin with, I was someone who was about to drop out of the hobby. I had read comics for almost 20 years and the thrill was gone. The titles I was reading had gotten so lame I was angry with myself each week for wasting my money on them, but I wanted to know what would happen next. I was just waiting for a place to jump off that would provide some sense of resolution and closure. After months of resentment and one disappointment after another, I decided that perfect place would never come, so I just let them go. One by one, I dropped titles that I no longer cared about.

Rather than invest the money in another form of entertainment, I decided to give comics another chance.

I pored through both old and new issues of CBG and other comics-related magazines to find out what comics other people enjoyed. The money I was spending on comics I no longer cared about I used to experiment with new titles. I didn't always like what I found, but it was an adventure. My interest in comics was revived, as I found new comics that I loved. The following is a list of some of the comics I have discovered and enjoy. I hope this list will help other fans who are in the situation I was in to revitalize their interest.

My favorites (in no particular order): Flash, Impulse, Madman, Incredible Hulk, Soulsearchers & Company, Thieves and Kings (I Box), Wandering Star, Concrete, Tales from the Beanworld, Strangers in Paradise, Strange Attractors, Bone, THB, Hepcats, Hellboy, Wonder Woman, A Distant Soil, Maison Ikkoku, Ranma ½, Poison Elves and Batman Adventures. Also look for Next Men, Danger Unlimited, Brooklyn Dreams, Moonshadow, Tales to Astonish (the Peter David one-shot), Sachs & Violens, and Daredevil: Man Without Fear in the back-issue bins.

Does anyone else have a list of suggestions of good comics to try? Your list may help save a comic-book fan. I know ones past helped me.

I'd like to tell everyone about two titles I've enjoyed. If you're not reading these comics, you're missing out on some great fun.

The first one is Big Bang Comics from Caliber Press (11904 Farmington Road, Livonia, MI 48150). This is a comic book for older fans like me. There are tribute issues to the Golden, Silver, and modern ages. Each one is a delightfully on-target take of the era. It's easy to see the artists and writers having fun with the stories. There are panels upon panels full of in-jokes and salutes to comics of days gone by.

If you grew up with the Golden Age heroes or cut your comics teeth reading the Golden Age stuff in the Batman 80-Page Giants or thrilled to the adventures of the Justice League in the 1960s, you have to treat yourself and check this series out. Big Bang isn't just a tribute; it's a labor of love. Hot tip: Join the Junior Watchmen of America and get a cool kit filled with lots of nifty junk.

Guess how we improved our pricing policy.

It's flat. Totally flat. So you'll get the same discount – and a big one, we might add – whether you buy one issue or one million issues. ➢ From now on you'll get the maximum discount on all new releases listed in Advance Comics. You'll also get great flat discounts on all backlist items from the best backlist in the industry. ➢ Why? Because we're your partner. We know you have to buy from at least three distributors now, so you can't rack up a big order with any single one, even if you want to. So instead of penalizing you, we're helping you. ➢ Flat pricing is our way of saying, "We're in this together." Because we are.

The second title is one I just discovered yesterday and fell in love with: Patty Cake from Permanent Press (P.O. Box 564, Monsey, NY 10952). The creation of Scott Roberts, Patty Cake is a little girl who gets into all sorts of little-girl adventures, as she lives a kid's life. Patty and her friend explore a path in the woods; Patty goes to The Store with Daddy; Patty learns the pull-a-quarter-out-of-your-ear trick that every good father should know. This strip captures the essence of childhood every bit as much as Calvin and Hobbes. Patty Cake is up to issue #3, and each one is a gem. I can't say enough good about it; Patty Cake is simply adorable.

All of the above comics are $2.95 an issue, and I'm sure you could get sample issues from the addresses supplied. Why not try them; if you haven't already? I'm not a paid promoter for these comics or even a friend of anybody who's doing them a favor. I'm just a guy who was so impressed with these comics I had to get the word out.

I've been reading in Oh, So? about how people's comics reading and buying patterns are changing, so I thought I'd throw my two scents in — but, then, I figured you wouldn't want to smell them, even on a good day.

Instead, here's what's happening with me and new comics:

My friend and I were spending way too much money on comics. What made it worse was it was the same comics. He'd buy Superman, I'd buy Superman. A while back, I turned him on to the Legion. I'd buy mine, he'd buy his, and we'd both walk away $5 poorer each month.

It was like going to a video store and offering to pay $6 for a rental. "Oh, no, we don't need change. We're both going to watch it."

I was buying the Superman titles to keep up with the story, not to have for the rest of my life. Two bucks seemed awfully steep for 15 minutes of reading, no matter how engaging.

We started lending comics back and forth. I buy the Legion and Flash titles (which are terrific), and he buys the Superman titles (also a lot of fun, especially Superboy). We're just doing this with the super-hero titles right now. Things that I'm likely to reread, such as Sandman or The Invisibles, I keep my own copies of. Still, that leaves me with more money to try titles I hadn't heard of.

Which brings me to the important part of this letter. I've only seen one copy of The Replacement God by Zander Cannon from Slave Labor's Amaze Ink imprint. It's a riot. The art is full of shadows but has quick movement and manages to be very expressive and funny. The first issue features a wonderful dungeon scene where two characters try to figure out what each other looks like by what each is saying. Since neither can see the other, and an objective depiction of the scene would be a bunch of black panels, Cannon uses the space to show what they're imagining. It's creative, and you can't help but smile when you read it.

Another wonderful find is Hilly Rose by B.C. Boyer from his Astro Comics. Hilly Rose is blessed with the most beautiful covers currently on the stands. When people were writing in saying what nine covers they'd like to display on their wall, I would have written in with these, if I had had any idea they were coming. Sure, there are only two issues out right now, but I'm confident the next seven will be gorgeous, too.

Sadly, Hilly Rose has a nearly indecipherable logo. It fits the comic book, and once you know the name you can see it, but it might be tough to pick out. Just find the breathtaking cover and look up. If it says "(indecipherable) Rose," you're golden. Also, the back cover will have a wonderful cross between a Pogo strip and a Saturday Evening Post cover, clearly labeled "Rocket Times." More great art.

Inside, there's a story — it's humorous science fiction, with Hilly as a reporter for her father's intergalactic news service. It's lighthearted, but it's not all slapstick. I recommend picking up both issues at once — I like the second better than the first. And I expect to like the third even more.

If these sound like your cup of tea, give them a try. It's not unusual to pay more than three bucks for a comic book from the big three these days, so the $2.95 cover prices won't be the deterrent they once were.

And if you haven't yet given Stray Bullets or Strangers in Paradise a try, you're missing out on some comics work that transcends much of what else is out there. Try them. If you don't like them, get someone to hypnotize you until you do.

I cannot wait until Adventure! returns. I was saddened to see it go; let's hope it stays around much longer this time.

Ahern's latest multiple-part adventure, the bunny suit saga, is something to look forward to each week. And that little green(?) bunny is the cutest thing.

Peter David's and Bob Ingersoll's columns are very interesting each week.

And I for one like the idea of polybagging CBG. I find that the polybagged issues arrive in my mailbox in one piece, while the unpolybagged issues sometimes get pretty torn up.

Now, my real reason for writing: Andrew Werling's letter in CBG #1131. I am not even going to justify his remarks about right-wingers with a response, since this is a weekly publication on comics and the hobby (notice I didn't say industry), not on politics.

I want to respond to his reply to Ingersoll's column on true heroes. I will say that I, too, did not read the comic book in discussion (Guy Gardner). I have no taste for comics that glorify such non-heroes as Guy Gardner, Punisher, Lobo, etc. Werling stated, "It's not so clear that Guy is a villain by his actions . . . " and "If this [Guy's killing of a villain] labels Guy a murderer in legal terms, so be it. It doesn't make his actions heinous." Well, let's see here. Guy kills a human being. Never mind that the person he killed is a supervillain. Killing anyone without a fair trial is murder and, therefore, in itself a heinous act.

What would Werling say, if the families of victims of the Oklahoma bombing were to kill the prime suspect without a trial? Would he have young teenagers reading this comic book think that, if they know of a bad guy, they can go kill him? I hope most of the readers understand that this is only a comic book and don't do this in real life. But who knows how they will be influenced by it?

To commit murder is illegal, and doing it makes Guy a bad guy. Too bad that both Guy and Werling have no faith in the legal system. If it is as bad as he says, maybe we should convert to the system of Judge Dredd: cop, jury, judge, and executioner. I hope it's not in my lifetime. Or anyone's lifetime.

Werling also stated, "To proclaim Guy's actions 'heinous' based simply on legal code . . . is overly simplistic." It may be simplistic, but that is the law. A comic book like that, which brings a non-hero such as Guy to same level as Captain America or Superman by calling him a hero, is one comic book that should be ashamed of itself.

For everyone who wants to read comics about true heroes (I know they're hard to find), check out Legionnaires and The Legion of Super-Heroes. Since Zero Hour, both have started at the beginning of the story of the Legion. These teen-agers

Mark Evanier's column in CBG #1131 on creators was spot-on. In the absence of some overwhelming evidence to the contrary, a character was created by the original writer and artist.

This is the theory I used when compiling a list of DC creators for Overstreet's late, lamented Gold and Silver. In putting that list together, I found a surprising degree of consensus as to who wrote what.

An unexpected difficulty, however, was determining what constituted a first appearance. There are three different "first" appearances of Congorilla, for example: Action #224, #248, and an earlier one I can't find at the moment. Then, there are all the different characters with the same name, such as the four (three?) Sandmen.

Rich Morrissey and I spent months coming up with rules to govern this, the gist of which are: If the character has the same name and powers as his/her predecessor, then it's the same character. Thus, The Flash was created by Gardner Fox and Harry Lampert, regardless of who the current occupant of the costume is, while the current Blue Beetle was created by Steve Ditko, not Charles Nicholas.

The issue of definitions aside, we found only two major DC characters were in doubt. The original Starman has long been considered as having been originally written by Gardner Fox. Recently, however, Jack Burnley, the original artist, has denied that this is true, although he can't remember the original writer's name. Those who study writer styles, however, continue to believe that Fox did write the first story.

MOOOOOO
AND WOMEN, TOO, I HOPE.

HOSLER©

The other is The Martian Manhunter. DC and Jack Schiff credit this character to Joe Samachson, a long-time writer of Batman, Johnny Quick, Shining Knight, and other DC strips of the '40s. Martin O'Hearn, who has matched more writing styles with creators than anybody else, says it was written by Jack Miller, who did write the vast majority of Manhunter stories, both in Detective and House of Mystery.

Except for these two characters, there is no reason that all currently published DC titles can't feature the same credit blurbs that accompany every appearance of Superman, Batman, and every Jack Kirby character, no matter how obscure.

Just taking a run through currently published DC titles, we can find many examples where creator credits should be included:

Animal Man - Dave Wood and Carmine Infantino
Aquaman - Mort Weisinger and Paul Norris
Captain Marvel - Bill Parker and C.C. Beck
Mary Marvel - Otto Binder and Jack Binder
Captain Marvel Jr. - France Herron and Mac Raboy
Catwoman - Bill Finger and Bob Kane
Green Arrow - Mort Weisinger and George Papp
Guy Gardner - John Broome and Gil Kane
Flash - Gardner Fox and Harry Lampert
Green Lantern - Bill Finger and Mart Nodell
Hawkman - Gardner Fox and Dennis Neville
Legion of Super-Heroes - Otto Binder and Al Plastino
Lobo - Roger Slifer and Keith Giffen
Ray - Will Eisner and Lou Fine
Sandman - Gardner Fox and Bert Christman
Shade the Changing Man - Steve Ditko
Spectre - Jerry Siegel and Bernard Bailey
Vigilante - Mort Weisinger and Mort Meskin

Maybe DC staffers can take a little time off from the distributor wars and the never-ending battle for market share and honor the people who made their livelihoods possible?

[While it is most simple to ascribe character creations to the original writer and artist, the practice is not necessarily accurate. Involvement on the part of an editor, costume and other character design done entirely by the writer (or by another artist — see Kurt Busiek's Astro City piece in #1132), etc. are extremely common in this field. And for any company to list someone as a creator has legal and financial consequences.

Mark pointed out that each year the Writers Guild of America arbitrates final credits on about 10% of today's scripts. That's today's scripts — when most of the participants are still alive and were present when those scripts got put together. And when there's a public forum and an organization set up to arbitrate those disputes legally, when they occur. No one ever disputed that Siegel and Shuster created Superman (though they, themselves, acknowledged influences that went into the creation) — so putting a creator line on Superman wasn't a legal problem.

Which is why many characters will probably go forever without full creator credits.]

making one of the toughest decisions of my life much easier. I have collected the Spider-Man titles since #151 of The Amazing Spider-Man. I scrimped and saved for years and have managed to collect all the way back to #21. My goal was to have the entire set, of course.

However, with the recent boom in back-issue interest, I am definitely priced out of that dream. And, thanks to Marvel's recent moves to be distributed by a separate company as well as to restart the Spidey titles, I have now discovered the perfect place to end my collection. When Spidey starts over, it will start without me. My collection will be complete, and I can spend my limited money on other titles that bring me more satisfaction. I took the same opportunity to rid myself of the mutant mania disease a while ago, when they "renewed" all the X-titles.

The move to a separate distributor also affects my monthly buying decisions. In months past, I would look through the entire Advance Comics or Previews (kindly given to me by my stores). If I spotted a Marvel title that looked interesting, I would order it. Now, however, I don't have time or inclination to look through two or three (or four) comics catalogs every month. When my current store owner (Hi, Rob) offered me a Marvel catalog along with my current Advance Comics, I thanked him and told him to save it for someone who cared. He knows the only remaining titles I collect, and, if something good comes along, I will pick it up from the rack, just like the good old days. I'll do the same with DC, if it comes to that.

I am also happy that several store owners are sharing horror stories and tips about the business. As a long-time consumer, I have experience from the paying side of the counter. First, I would like to thank Rob and his staff at Funnybooks for making my transition from Kansas to Phoenix very smooth. Take note: when I arrive in a new town, I always look for stores in the Yellow Pages. I advise all store owners to get at least a listing in this directory. I travel a lot and always look in the phone book for a store in a new city in which to purchase back issues and fill holes. If you can afford it, a map or cross streets in your ad are wonderful. I have often dropped $25 to $50 in stores from Dallas to Atlanta (and in smaller towns — try Paulding, Ohio), when I found the comics I needed. I know that my purchases won't pay your rent, but it sure makes the day's balance sheet look better.

I chose my new store in this area because it was clean, neat, and organized. It is a small store but it is well lit, not crammed full of loose comics, shelves about to fall, etc. I am married and often am embarrassed to have my wife walk into some stores. Why should I spend money in a store that I feel uncomfortable in?

Rob and his staff were neat and courteous and explained the store policy quickly. None of them are fanboys who make fun of my choices. They always respond to me when I walk in, and Rob knew my name and face by the second visit. Also important: They don't make fun of other customers as a way of making small talk with me. If you talk about the guy with the funny glasses, how do I know you don't talk about me when I am gone?

I recently visited a store in the area to look for missing back issues. I was in the store with about 10 comics already in my hand and couldn't get either the owner or the clerk to tell me where in the various stacks of cardboard boxes I might find other issues.

They were both too busy talking about the recent hot movie to bother making a sale. I felt that perhaps I was intruding too much on their lives by trying to give them money. I put the comics back where I got them and walked out.

I am sure I am just another jerk to that particular owner, but that's OK. I've let everyone interested know about that store. And I feel no compulsion to return to tell the owner about his problems. If he wouldn't listen to me when I was a paying customer, why should I waste my time with him now?

While I'm telling stories, I have one more gripe: Why do some clerks look at you like you are from a foreign country when you ask them where to find certain titles and issues? I have shopped dozens and dozens of stores and hundreds of dealers in conventions, and there are at least half-dozen different ways to file The Amazing Spider-Man. I've seen it under T, A, and S, as well as lumped with every other Spidey title (thus, add W and P to the list). And, if you don't have the boxes labeled in any way, how should I know where to start?

My advice from this side of the counter is simple: Don't make it tough for me to spend money in your store. If you do, I won't.

Batman Forever is great. It broke at least two box office records.

Who should be in the next Batman movie? Since Batman Forever leaves Batman's identity revealed to Dr. Chase Meridian, his ladyfriend, and to those who followed The Riddler and Two-Face, the plot could be interesting.

Perhaps The Joker and his girlfriend could develop unique ways to threaten to reveal Batman's identity to the world.

If Jack Nicholson won't return to play The Joker, Tom Hanks could.

Perhaps Julia Roberts as Harley Quinn.

Comics no longer mirror society. I will admit, however, that at one point, comics did mirror society closely. In the '40s, while World War II was raging, we saw heroes created, punching out Japanese and Nazis. In the '50s, as we continued to reel from the shock of what the Nazis had done in their death camps, we saw horror comics rise as never before. In the '60s, dealing with an unpopular war, we saw heroes begin to seem angst-ridden and flawed. And in the '70s, during a time of disillusionment and moral turpitude, we saw more twisted creations begin to form than ever before.

That's where the reflection ended.

I think it had a lot to do with the way in which comics began to be distributed and sold. Around this time (late '70s, early '80s), comics began to be sold in their own shops. No longer did publishers gear their material to Everyman. Instead, a new group rose up who would support the comic-book industry as never before: the fanboys. These pathetic losers at life were ready, willing, and able to do whatever was necessary to escape from their dull, seemingly useless lives. They wanted wild fantasies that would allow them to forget about the world around them – and how apparently unable they were to exist in it. And that's just what they got.

That brings us to the present. Judging from recent fan awards and other such contests, not much has changed. Sure, there may be a bit more respect for storytelling than there was a few years ago, but not much. For the most part, comic-book readership is made up of wide-eyed escapists. The publishers know this (boy, do they know it) and they are doing everything in their power to pander to it. Don't think for a second that, if big companies found out that comics that mirrored society would sell better than mindless super-heroism, they wouldn't start pumping it out immediately.

I guess comics mirrored society for as long as they could – until it wasn't profitable.

That's where self-publishers and small press come in. In a recent letter to all Spirits of Independence exhibitors, Dave Sim said, "I become more convinced by the day that self-publishing and the small press are a completely separate environment from traditional mainstream comic books."

From my own experience in the small-press and self-publishing arenas, I must agree. You see, the big difference between the small press and mainstream is that one is made up of creative freedom, while the other deals solely in pandering to the lowest common denominator. Self-publishers and small pressers do what they do for themselves, not for fanboys. And, like most other great works of literature, it makes their creations all that more valuable to the industry and society as a whole.

I'm glad things are being shaken up in our industry. If things shake hard enough, people are going to begin waking up. Anyone who knows anything about business know that shake-ups are usually the worst for the guys in charge (in this case, big publishers). When fanboys dissipate and speculators disappear, you're left with readers: intelligent, educated people who care more about what the story is saying than anything else. What irony it would be to see big publishers forced to put out well-written, well-drawn, thought-provoking literature in order to stay afloat. Time will tell.

I read with bemusement the letter from Frantz Kenol in CBG #1132, in which he states "I am ashamed, embarrassed, and angry at who and what I am. I am a comic-book collector." He goes on to say that he is angry at himself and collectors in general for continuing to buy a long line of ill-executed pap for which he has little or no interest.

His ire then switches to the producers of pap, with their #0 issues, hologram covers, and other gimmicks, as he bemoans the lack of quality comics (of which he goes on to list about a dozen).

Kenol is right to feel despair that a good number of adults continue to fall prey to sophomoric marketing schemes the comic-book industry shamelessly employs in its efforts to sell more and more units of less and less interesting product. And, if he counts himself among that number, a little embarrassment is certainly in order. But self-loathing is counter-productive, as I should well know, since no one is more self-depreciating and less productive than I. And there's a simple solution to Kenol's problem: Stop buying bad comics.

My own folder at my local comics store (More Fun Comics in New Orleans) is a fluid thing; titles are added and dropped at an almost reckless pace. Sentimental as I might feel about a certain character or creator, my folder operates on a simple standard: Once it fails to entertain, it's gone.

I learned this lesson about 10 years ago with The Uncanny X-Men.

One day, I was wading through the Mutant Massacre, when I realized that nothing about the comic book appealed to me. I felt the story was poorly told, the idea behind it silly, and the art competent but unmoving. Reluctant as I was to quit cold turkey (this was The X-Men, after all. One just didn't not read The X-Men), I did.

And, as the years passed, with Inferno and all the subsequent nonsense, I didn't miss it a bit (until I picked up a Claremont-Lee issue scant months before the advent of X-Men #1, but that's another story). The point is, hard as it may be at first, those pangs will disappear. Why, I'd even quit reading Nexus, if it started getting boring (although it hasn't).

Kenol next loses me when he states, "This industry thrives without following a basic rule of business: Know your customers and give them what they want." Actually, that's not true. This industry understands that rule all too well. Dark Horse, Vertigo, Marvel, Chaos! – they all know who buys their comics and have a reasonably good idea of what they'll buy. It's called the bottom line.

Marvel, to name one example, has (with some notable exceptions) churned out convoluted, poorly drawn power fantasies for 10-year-old boys, it's true; but, because its creators are very successful at it, Marvel can only assume that the people buying its comics want this stuff. Call me cynical, but it's fruitless to blame Marvel. This is a business, and it has mouths to feed. The only thing it's going to respond to is market pressure. Again, if you're subsidizing the production of comics you can't stand, you can easily stop.

Kenol is right, again, when he says that The Dark Knight Returns begat a slew of grim and gritty super-heroes; I've made this point before in print myself. However, I do not include myself among the "sheep" who continued to purchase these darker comics, letting their producers take advantage of me. And, while I've bought a foil-stamped cover or two in my time, I've bought these types of comics knowing exactly what I was getting into. It wasn't my usual reading material; it was trashy; it was crass and exploitative; it had bulging forearms that would frighten Popeye and boobs bigger than the human head.

I'm not an addict, you see; I'm a consumer. And I exercise my power by being a discriminating reader. I will only support titles that continue to entertain me. Yes, the comic-book industry needs to have its feet held to the fire, but angry letters to CBG aren't going to make that happen. It'll only happen when retailers order less and less junk from the distributors, and that'll only happen when grown men and women quit plunking down their money every week for a fix, for a pile of comics only 10% (or less) of which they'll actually enjoy.

The comics field doesn't need your shame or your embarrassment. It can stand your anger but what it could really use is your muscle. Put your money where your mouth is. It's really that simple.

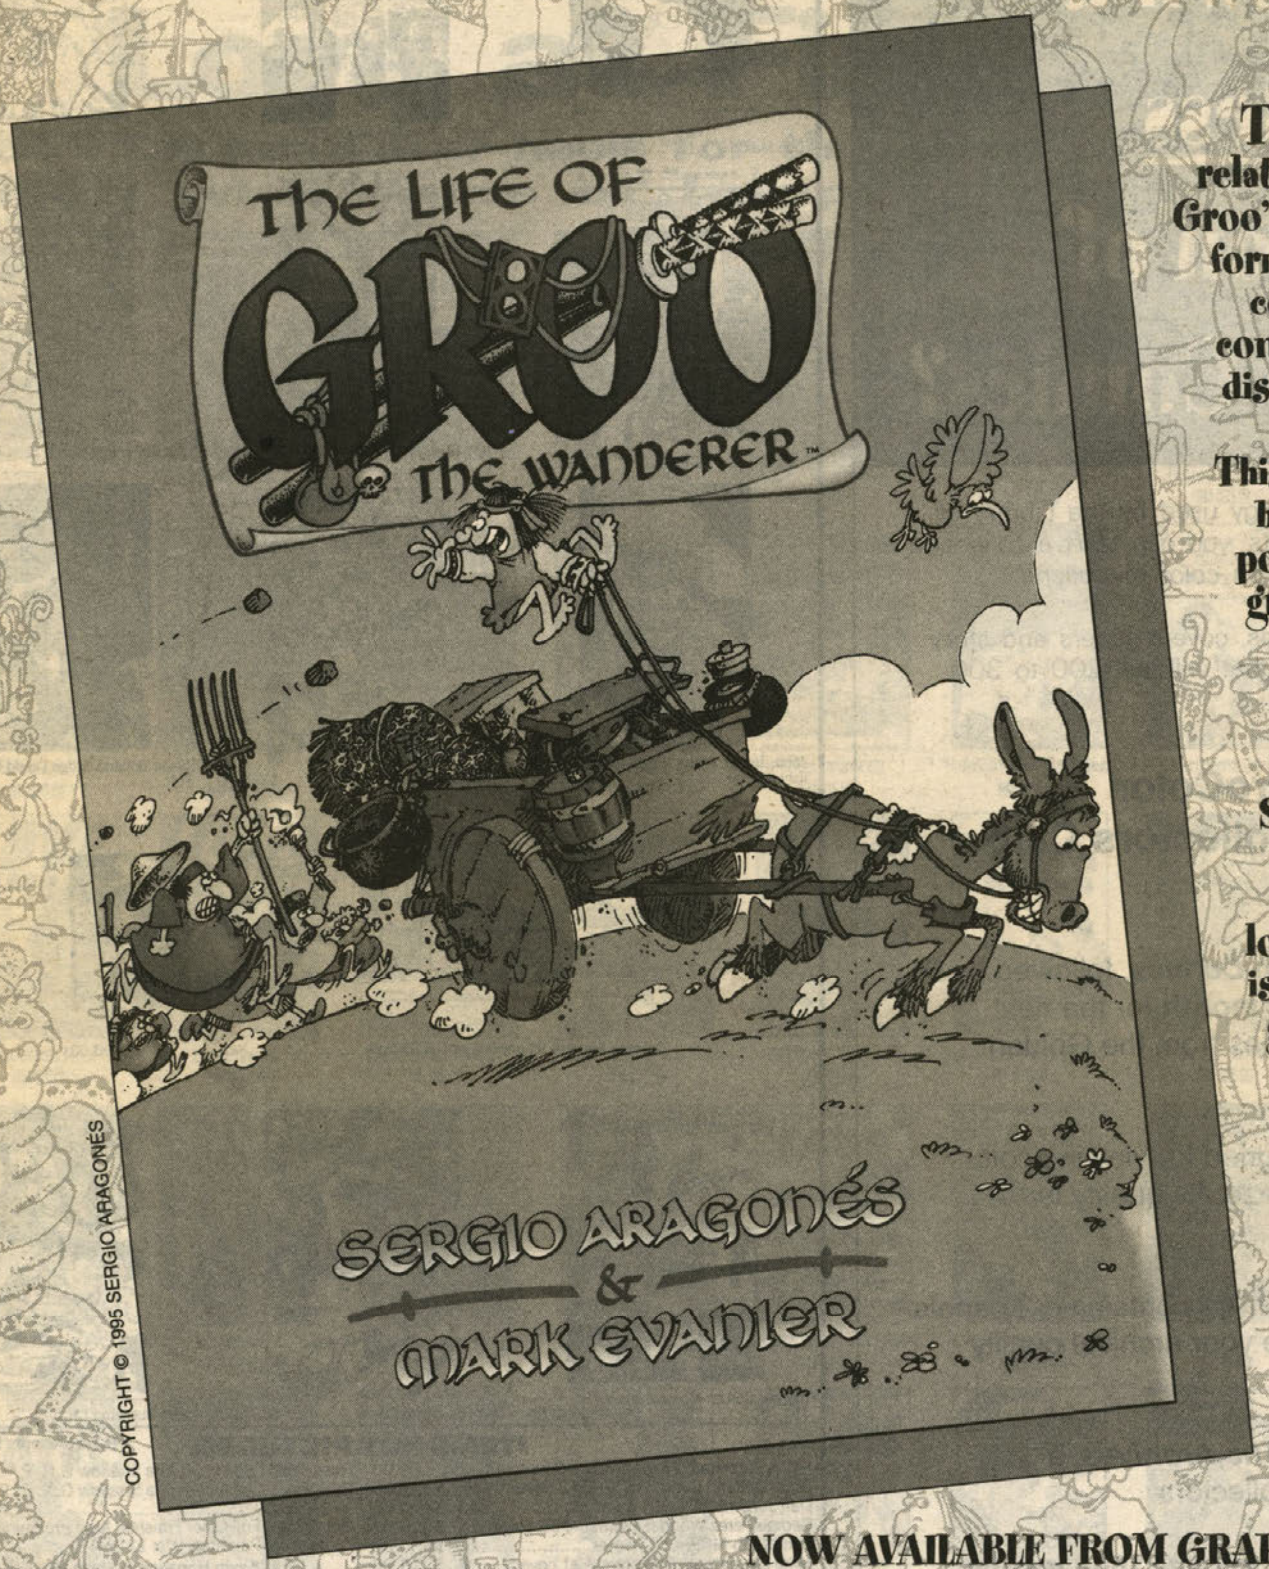
LIFE IS CHEAP!!



The Life of Groo relates the awesome tale of Groo's clumsy, disaster-prone formative years...which, of course, should not be confused with his clumsy, disaster-prone adulthood.

This pathetic tale has never before been revealed... possibly because it was a great secret, more likely because no one was interested.

Mark Evanier wrote it, Sergio Aragonés drew it and almost as many people read it! Now, at long last, The Life of Groo is back in print! And we're going to keep printing it until you buy it so you might as well get it over with!

This one's a bit complicated, especially if I disguise all the names, as I think I oughta. But it's too good to skip, so please bear with me and keep track of who's who.

Tom Glitter was a big TV star — a man with lots of ratings at the time of this anecdote and, therefore, lots of power. Tom was used to getting his own way but he wasn't pushy or offensive about it. I'm not sure if he's the hero of this story but I don't think he's the villain, if there even is one. At the time of this anecdote, we find me employed as one of his show's writers.

Dick Mogul was a big-time TV exec and head of the company that was producing Tom Glitter's hit TV show. Dick isn't actually in our tale, but you have to know who he is. You also have to know that he's one of those people whose distinctive speech pattern is very easy to imitate. Everyone on the staff of Tom Glitter's show — every actor, every writer, every camera-person, every copier repair technician — could imitate Dick Mogul. I am a poor-to-mediocre impressionist and even I could do a serviceable Dick Mogul impression.

At the staff Christmas party, a band of us got together, called ourselves the Dick Mogul Choir, and did our impression of 19 Dick Moguls singing "Jingle Bells." The only person present who didn't get hysterical was — you guessed it — Dick Mogul, who spent the whole party wandering around wondering why everyone thought those strange voices sounded like him.

Last, we have Harry Whimper. Harry was an executive at the network that was broadcasting Tom Glitter's series. Not a big executive, not even a medium executive, but a lowly one — just barely important enough to have his own business cards. Harry was new to the television business and new to the network — and he had been assigned the thankless task of "covering" Tom Glitter's show.

When a TV show is being created and started, it is usually under the jurisdiction of the network department known as "Development." Once it is up and functioning, however, the development department turns its attention to scrounging up new shows, and the ongoing series comes under the attention of the "Current" people.

Depending on the nature of the show, the network's interest in it, and how much the producers will allow them to interfere, the Current folks keep an eye on the show, offer whatever creative "input" the network wishes to have, approve whatever the network has to approve, and generally make certain that the producers continue to deliver the show that the network is paying them to deliver.

The Current people should not be confused with the Standards and Practices people at the network — the ones dispatched to make sure no one says naughty words or flashes body parts. Their job is completely separate from the Current people and, at times, in direct opposition. I once worked on a show where we did a beach-party sketch, and the CBS Standards and Practices rep was screaming that the swimsuits on the girl dancers were too small, while the CBS Current Programming rep was telling us to make them smaller.

Being a Current rep for a network is not one of your great jobs. If a show to which you've been assigned is doing poorly in the ratings, the bosses at your network tend to yell a lot at you, like it's your fault that the show they picked isn't a hit. If the show is a hit, you (of course) get no credit. In fact, it is highly unlikely that anyone will even listen to you. The hit's producers usually take the position that they're delivering a hit; therefore, the network should shut up and leave them alone. (They are not always wrong to feel this way.) If and when they must discuss matters with the network, they usually want to deal with the top people, not you.

This, to a great extent, was Harry Whimper's problem: He'd been assigned by the network to supervise its interests on the Tom Glitter series. Since the show was a hit before Harry Whimper came along, and since Harry was a little moist behind the ears (well-meaning but highly inexperienced), no one at the show was particularly interested in listening to his suggestions and criticisms.

It may well be that he was picked for the assignment, not because anyone thought he could improve the show, but because he was a nice guy, because the experienced Current reps were needed more on other shows, and because no one at the Glitter show was going to listen to anyone the network installed in the job, anyway.

But if that was the logic behind Harry's assignment to the show, no one bothered to tell him. He arrived, first day on the job, filled with notes and suggestions and ideas and criticisms and enough enthusiasm to light downtown San Diego. His predecessor on the job knew enough to stay out of the gears: He showed up on the set every now and then and made a token comment on every script, just to prove he'd read them. Harry, on the other hand, was there every minute — and he had an opinion on everything. He was forever giving "notes," which is what show-biz folks call comments or criticisms.

Some of his ideas probably weren't awful. Anyone who offers 50 ideas is bound to have two or three good ones in there. The trouble is that by the time everyone suffers through the 47 lousy ones, the good ideas are likely to go unnoticed. Moreover, Harry was notably lacking in credentials. He had never produced a TV show, never directed one, certainly never written or acted in one. The folks he was trying to supervise had done all those things, in some cases very successfully. Together, they had created a hit show without any suggestions from Harry Whimper, and some couldn't understand why they suddenly had hundreds of them.

There were ways Harry could have offered his ideas without alienating everyone, but he sure didn't find them. By the end of his first week, people were avoiding him, and, by the end of the second, he couldn't leave a room without everyone hurling epithets and moaning, "Who does this clown think he is?"

I would love to report that I was sympathetic to his plight, but he got to me a few times. One day, we had a table reading of a new script — all the actors gathered around, reading it aloud for the first time.

Table readings are very awkward; the actors are learning as they go along, so there is little, if any, "performance." Standard Operating Procedure is to give them time to read it a few times, perhaps even get it "on its feet," then for the writers and producers to see how it stands and begin whatever rewrites are necessary.

On this day — the day I joined the ranks of those bemoaning Harry's every offering — we finished the table reading and, before we knew it, Harry was up and ticking off a list of what he felt was wrong with the script and each actor's reading of his or her lines. The whole critique would have been excessive coming after the final taping; coming right after a first reading, it was ridiculous and insulting.

The next day, Harry walked into one of our meetings and mentioned that, the night before, he had seen Richard Burton perform Macbeth. Before I knew it, I was asking, "How many notes did you give him?"

That was my way of striking back. Tom Glitter had a better, more effective method.

A few days later, Tom and I were sitting in the lobby of the office, talking about nothing of note, giving the receptionist a hard time.

I once worked on a show where we did a beach-party sketch, and the CBS Standards and Practices rep was screaming that the swimsuits on the girl dancers were too small, while the CBS Current Programming rep was telling us to make them smaller.

A call came in for Dick Mogul from Harry Whimper. The receptionist said, "I'll connect you," then realized Mogul was out of the office. She started to get on the line again to tell Harry that Dick was out when, suddenly, Tom Glitter grabbed the phone away from her and launched into his Dick Mogul impression.

"Hello, Harry," Tom said à la Mogul.

"Hi, Dick," Harry said. "Listen, I want to discuss the rerun schedule with you. I think we ought to run a rerun of show #41 the last week of December, rather than waste a new show on a week with low viewing levels." He had no idea he was actually talking with the star of the show.

Tom signalled for me to pick up the extension carefully, which I did. I heard him say, still impersonating Mogul, "I can't be bothered with that now, Harry. I just fired Tom Glitter."

Harry was aghast: "What?"

"I fired him — tore up his contract and everything."

Harry gasped, "You can't fire the star of the show."

"Sure I can," Tom said. "I can and I did. It'll be a better show without him. He's a lousy actor, an insufferable jerk, and a thoroughly untalented man.

"You should consult the network before you do something like that," Harry stammered, his voice fluctuating a great many octaves.

"Oh, come on," Tom said, still slamming himself, "I can't believe there's one person at the network who won't cheer that we got rid of that rotten actor." This went on for about five minutes, with Tom Glitter trashing Tom Glitter in every conceivable way and me clamping a hand over my mouth to keep from being heard laughing. Soon, Tom had Harry (still thinking he was talking with Dick Mogul) saying, "You know, you're right — the show will be better off without Tom Glitter."

"And this way, we head off the scandal," Tom added.

"Scandal?" Harry was moaning. "What scandal?"

"Oh, come now. You're supposed to be up on everything. You can't tell me that you didn't know about . . ." and here he began to itemize a list of sex crimes for which Tom Glitter was supposedly wanted. Some involved small animals, some involved other celebrities of all genders and ages, a few even involved farming equipment. All were completely fictitious — or, at least, I think they were — especially the one about Henry Kissinger, an ocelot, and a hay-baler.

"Everyone in show business knows about Tom Glitter and this stuff," Tom Glitter said. "You are in show business, aren't you, Harry?"

Harry quickly recovered: "Oh, uh, yes, of course. I'd heard all those things. I just wasn't sure what you'd heard." By 15 minutes into the call, "Dick Mogul" had Harry agreeing that Tom Glitter was the most talentless, immoral person to walk the Earth and that he should have been fired two seasons ago. Harry actually said, "You know, just between us, I always thought Tom Glitter was really terrible on the show. I never liked him and I don't know anyone who ever liked him."

By this time, I was entering convulsions from stifling laughter and I was making feverish "cut" signs to Tom as if to say, "For God's sake, give the guy a break!" Tom, I guess, decided it had gone on long enough and he dropped the impression, speaking instead in his own, rather-recognizable voice.

"Hey, Harry, it's me!"

"What?"

"It's me, Tom Glitter. You've been talking to me all along. I was doing my Dick Mogul impression." (Now, lest this all sound like a cruel practical joke, let me direct your attention to the next moment, when Tom decided to give Harry an "out." Tom was a good sport, and I honestly believe Harry, had he been smart enough to seize on this way out, could have caused it all to be — well, let's not say "forgotten." Let's say that if he had given the right answer to the following question, he could have kept his job on the show. But he didn't.)

Tom asked him, "Hey, that was great, the way you played along. You knew it was me from the start, didn't you?"

To which Harry actually said, "Gee, Tom, no. I had no idea." End of call, end of Harry's involvement with the show.

He immediately went to his superiors and said, "I have just embarrassed myself beyond belief with Tom Glitter. I can never go back to that show." They agreed and transferred him to other programming. We got a replacement who wasn't quite so eager to offer detailed critiques every time someone cleared their throat.

There's no other punch line to this story but there is something of a happy ending. The shock of what happened apparently caused Harry Whimper to do some solid self-assessment, pondering what he had done that had caused Tom Glitter to set him up like that. He wrote Tom a letter apologizing and asking if they could have a phone call some day so Tom could tell him what he'd done wrong. Tom agreed, and some sort of heart-to-heart conversation took place, resulting in Harry scaling back his enthusiasm for offering criticism of everyone and everything around him.

He and Tom also became pretty close friends and, when Harry decided network life wasn't the life for him, Tom helped Harry get a job at a TV production company. They have a few hits, and I can't help but wonder how Harry deals with the guy the network sends over to give notes on his shows.

Last I heard, he was trying to polish his impression of the head of the studio. Let's hope he never has a need to use it.

Riverdale is in peril

By Marc Patten

Beginning this month and continuing into October, Archie fans will get to explore the history of the hometown of America's Archietypal teen-ager. Too bad the town may not survive to revel in it.

The 3½-part "House of Riverdale" crossover begins in an eight-page prologue in World of Archie #17 and continues through Jughead #76, Betty and Veronica #95, and Archie #442.

"Last year, we did a four-part crossover called 'Love Showdown' that had a tremendous impact on our sales and on Archie in general," said Archie Editor in Chief Victor Gorelick. Gorelick continued that he wanted to do a different kind of crossover event – to add adventure to the light-hearted interactions of Archie and the gang.

Enter Batton Lash. Gorelick said that he wanted to work with an established writer who had also worked on and was comfortable with the Archie characters. "We wanted to do something that had a mystery or ghost theme to it – which is Batt's forte," said Gorelick. "I've been trying to get Batton Lash to write a story for me for about 15 years. I worked for Batt, doing the lettering for Wolff & Byrd for about six years, and I've always loved his writing. Getting him to do a story for me is a highlight of my career. The whole idea of 'The House of Riverdale' is actually Batt's, not mine."

Lash said, "When I was a kid, I always liked the Life with Archie series, which wasn't so much antics and gags, but more putting the gang in adventurous situations. The stories were still funny and light-hearted, but there was a little bit of danger and excitement to them, sort of like Nancy Drew or the Hardy Boys. The Archie/Punisher title was a lot of fun to do, but it was still a high-concept project. It's been a real treat just to work on the characters."

Lash said that people who have never written an Archie script and who think it's a snap don't realize the difficulty of the work involved. "It's a lot tougher than people give it credit for. I did a lot of rewrites. I was actually late with two of the scripts because I just kept rewriting them, as I pulled my hair out, saying, 'I've totally underestimated this kind of story.' "

Basically, the story goes like this. [Spoiler Warning: Obviously, this deals with what will happen in the three titles to come.] The legendary Riverdale House is about to be torn down. The kids, realizing the house has a great deal of historical, as well as personal, significance, try to convince the town council to declare it a landmark. Their attempt is unsuccessful, but the kids refuse to give up, even as the house is destroyed. The mystery deepens, when a stranger warns Archie not to save the house, because of an ancient curse that could doom the entire town.

Readers will see the status quo of the characters and their town disrupted, but only for the duration of the story, said Archie Promotions Director Paul Castiglia. "We haven't disrupted things much in the Archie universe in the last few years, with the exception of 'Love Showdown,' so that's what makes this story unique. There is some real peril present in this storyline. How it gets resolved remains to be seen."

The original concept involved a motif that was to run through all three parts that had each character being arrested and jailed as a victim of circumstance, but the idea was nixed by the publisher. Lash concurred.

"I don't really believe in deconstructing popular iconic characters and remaking them in tune with the times – which becomes, of course, instantly dated," Lash said. "I wasn't too keen on turning Archie and the gang into juvenile delinquents or disillusioned generation-Y characters. Although I had to alter the plot, the kids are now only in danger of getting arrested."

Lash doesn't expect other writers to follow what he has set up in "House of Riverdale." He commented, "Every writer has his or her own vision. That's why I do my own thing with Wolff & Byrd, where I have full control. I don't expect that type of control with Archie. I hope they'll bring back Officer Blunt – a hard-nosed cop from New York. He is totally suspicious of any teen-ager, including the Riverdale gang. He thinks they're all troublemakers."

When asked if and how the characters would be changed as a result of their experiences in the story, Lash was specific: "The reason I like the Archie characters, and why it's more inviting to do an Archie story now than stories involving Superman, Batman, or Spider-Man, is that the archetypal characters haven't been altered for 50 years. It's my opinion that the iconic characters from the other large companies have been altered to some extent. The basic concepts of those characters have been tinkered with to the point where I don't believe the characters are as appealing as they were when I was a kid or even, say, 15 or 20 years ago.

"I don't believe in shocking for the sake of shocking. You can always add a little more flavoring and complexity to a character, but you should stay true to the archetype. I see no reason to change Archie just for the sake of change."

Castiglia said, "At the heart of the story is a threat to the safety of small-town America and how the familiar gang deals with being thrust into that new situation."

According to Lash, the villain of the story is against progress. "He wants to stay close to the earth," said Lash. He pointed out that mistrust of technology is a topical issue. "New York magazine recently ran a cover story about people who don't trust computers and the advancements in new technology. The 'House of Riverdale' villain comes back to haunt the town because he discovers that the old house is going to be torn down so a strip mall can be built. There is a relevance that kind of came about by accident."

Another story angle is the theme of youth against society. "In the story, you have a bunch of teen-agers pitted against adults on the town council," said Gorelick. "They want to have more of a voice in what's going on in their environment.

"Kids for the most part are always getting brushed off and ignored. The Riverdale House is a part of the town's history that the kids feel should stay, and they want their voices heard. The rest of the story deals with the ongoing battle with the adults who perceive the kids as a bunch of troublemakers and want to have the gang put in jail and punished for interfering. If there are going to be any changes in Riverdale as a result of the story, you might say we're trying to give the teen-agers of Riverdale more of a voice in what happens to their town."

Gorelick said past attempts by the company to change the characters have usually met with unsuccessful results. "If we had a story where Jughead walked into the room and said he wasn't hungry," said Gorelick, "people wondered what was wrong with him. Likewise, if Reggie suddenly became a nice guy, people would wonder what he was up to.

"We tried to have Jughead become interested in girls, and nobody liked it. We tried to have Veronica be a little nicer, and people thought she was too nice. Our readers are comfortable with the characters the way they are. They don't want to see too many changes – even in hairdos. I wanted to change Betty's and Veronica's hairstyles, and the readers complained.

Archie: The Big Picture

Archie Publications recently announced that a script is being prepared by Universal Pictures for a live-action movie about Archie and the gang.

Promotions Director Paul Castiglia said, "From what I've seen of the script, the story will focus on the classic love triangle. It's the story that everybody knows. It's the cornerstone of the series." The movie should appear in theaters by the end of 1996, if all goes according to plan.

The rumor that Shannon Doherty will play Veronica is, according to him, no more than a rumor. "There's an old joke about Betty and Veronica, that the girls are drawn exactly the same way except their hairstyles and hair color are different," he said. "If it were up to me, I'd get Alicia Silverstone (Clueless) to play both roles."

He added, "Kids take these characters seriously. We get letters every day, asking the characters for advice, telling them they want dates, etc. I think it's very important that the actors who portray the kids can really pass as teen-agers."

A Broadway play is also in development, but no details are available.

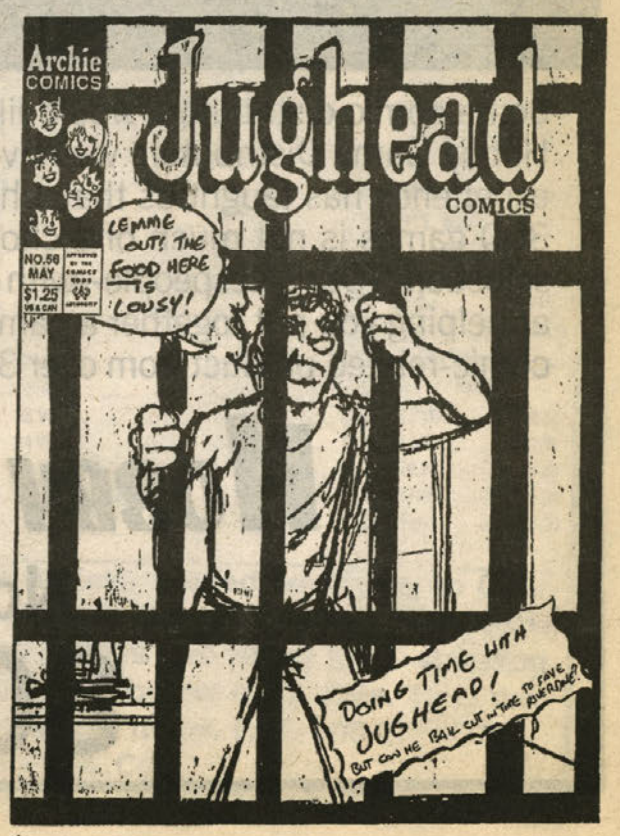
OH, RONNIE – HOW'D WE GET INTO THIS?!
I'M NOT SAYING A WORD UNTIL I SEE MY LAWYER!
WOMEN BEHIND BARS!
THE STORY WILL SHOCK YOU!



The characters are part of Americana."

According to Lash, the fact that the characters remain unchanged has even influenced fashion trends. "Jughead has worn that hat for so long, it's back in style. I am convinced that the reason that it came back in style is the fact that Jughead always wore it."

"House of Riverdale" is being billed as Archie Goes Gothic or, in Castiglia's words, "Stephen King Lite." Archie fans can look forward to such creepy and supernatural elements as characters entering each other's dreams, characters being manipulated by dreams, trances, ravens, and a 100-year-old curse.

Lash said, "The outcome is anyone's guess and is completely unlike, say, a Scooby Doo cartoon, where the kids pull the sheet off old man Withers and he says, 'I would have gotten away with it, too, if it wasn't for those pesky kids.' The story involves a bona fide supernatural threat."

Castiglia said, "One of the great things about this story is that, through the course of it, the gang actually learns about the town's history and their family histories. I hope it affects kids who are reading it enough for them to realize, 'Hey, a big part of who I am today and where I'm going tomorrow is connected to my past.' "

Gorelick said that bits and pieces of Riverdale's history have been revealed before, but nothing as extensive as in Lash's story. "There was a Civil War battle fought over where Picken's Park is. Even where Pop Tate's Choc'Lit Shop is located is considered a historic landmark," said Gorelick.

Lash's praised the artists who brought his story to life. "To see the script I submitted with my little thumbnails brought to life by legends, Stan Goldberg and Dan DeCarlo, two of the greatest cartoonists in the industry – I was just thrilled. I thought, No wonder everyone wants to write comics. This is a lot of fun."

Castiglia said if the series proves popular enough to be collected, it will include some of Lash's thumbnails. "Batt has a love for the characters that really comes through in the story, and you can see it through his thumbnails."

"I always had a crush on Miss Grundy," said Lash, laughing. "I felt bad for her. No, seriously. During puberty, I had crushes on Betty and Veronica, just like every other boy in America."

Fans can expect more of the same from Archie in 1996 and beyond. Castiglia said, "I think people can expect what everyone has come to expect: good, clean, wholesome, believable fun. Archie will forever be clumsy, girl-crazy, absent-minded, and getting into all sorts of trouble. Jughead will always be the all-knowing, all-seeing wise guy. Reggie will always be the schemer. The girls will keep vying for Archie's attention, and the faculty and the parents will remain befuddled."

World of Archie #18, shipping in December, will feature a date with TV's The X-Files, or rather, The X-Folders. After Archie and Veronica watch TV stars Mallowmar and Sully in the stars' first motion picture, the teen-agers encounter UFOs outside the theater. With the aid of the ever-sleuthing Jughead and Dilton, the group investigates the mysterious whos, whats, wheres, and whys.

Cheryl Blossom has proven very popular, according to Castiglia, and she will continue to interact with the gang. Archie's ancillary characters, like Josie and the Pussycats and Sabrina the Teen-Age Witch, may see more activity, as well. "Sabrina is being filmed as a made-for-cable TV movie. The producers have cast Melissa Hart, who plays Clarissa on Nickelodeon's Clarissa Tells It All."

The company is also considering a new title with a new set of teen-age characters. "It will be a totally new universe of teen-age characters never seen before in a specific setting," said Castiglia. No details could be revealed at press time as to the time of launch or the characters themselves.

Street Sharks, based on the toy line, and a revamped Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles will appear this fall, as will the Archie Americana: Best of the Sixties trade paperback. "This book delivers," said Castiglia. "There are hippie stories, drag racing, surfing, love beads, Beatlemania – the whole nine yards is there."

Questioned about the timelessness of the Archie family, Castiglia said, "Even though the styles change, the fads change, and their extra-curricular activities change to reflect the times, the core of the characters remains the same. As Batt said, they each represent a specific archetype.

The situations the characters get placed in, such as love triangles, homework, dealing with parents, etc., are timeless because everybody goes through them. Archie deals with all of these things, sometimes in a humorous fashion and sometimes in a serious fashion. This is what Archie exemplifies."

Lash said, "Every decade has its own teen-age bunch that the public latches onto in film or TV, whether it's Dobie Gillis, the Partridge family, the Happy Days crowd, Saved by the Bell, or the kids from 90210, and Archie is always the point of comparison. In the year 2015, when there's Galaxy High or some such, it will be compared to Archie, and Archie will outlive them all. The popularity and longevity of this dopey kid and his friends is unbelievable. They'll be dancing on our graves."

Gorelick said, "The thing that is very important about all of these characters is that, no matter how many differences in opinion they have with each other or how often their personalities clash, they'll always be friends. They're always willing to help one another when the chips are down.

"Riverdale is a comfortable place to go, when you have to confront all of today's problems on a day-to-day basis. It's a nice escape. You can feel safe there, and children and adults want to feel safe."

He added, "People feel safe buying our comics for their kids, because they can count on us to promote good values. People don't trust a lot of things these days, but they know they can trust Archie and his friends."

Archie Comics

✸ Readers can witness the rise of pop art, as Beatlemania invades Riverdale, the Riverdale teens become flower children, and Archie and the gang hit the surf and dress in mod fashions, in Best of the Sixties, the third trade paperback in the Archie Americana Series. The 96-page color book featuring covers and interior stories from Archie comics of the 1960s is scheduled to ship Oct. 3 with a price of $9.95.

Caliber Press

✸ A young woman trained in criminology and self-defense is possessed by the vengeful ghost of an Atlantean sorceror in the Seeker #1, scheduled to ship in November. The 48-page issue combines the complete first issue of the former Seeker Sky Comics series with a new story which continues the character's introduction.

Writer Joe Martin will carry Seeker through four monthly 48-page adventures before the series settles into a standard 32-page length. All issues will be priced at $2.95. Raff Ienco will provide the interior art, while covers will feature art by Franchesco, Jake Jacobsen, and David Mack.

Martin said, "The current Seeker force will pull away from the super-hero aspects, and it'll be more of an introspective series without sacrificing any of the action."

DC Comics

✸ In a world of aesthetic fascism, where everyone is required to be beautiful, two outcasts – a psychologically tormented man and his limbless mate – plan an escape from their state-run institution, as Ted McKeever's new five-issue Vertigo series opens in Industrial Gothic #1. Scheduled to begin shipping Oct. 31, the series takes the two on a journey across a landscape of abandoned power plants, marauding gangs, bizarre inhabitants, and ghostly apparitions in an effort to locate a legendary sanctuary for misfits. The title will retail for $2.50.

✸ Black Canary teams with Oracle to protect an industrialist against a violent "eco-terrorist group" in Black Canary/Oracle: Birds of Prey, scheduled to ship Nov. 21. The 64-page one-shot is written by Chuck Dixon and features art by Gary Frank and John Dell. The title retails for $3.95.

Exhibit A Press

✸ Batton Lash parodies The X-Files in issue #9 of Wolff & Byrd, Counselors of the Macabre, scheduled to ship in early November. Conspiracy is in the wind, as two FBI agents begin trampling on the rights of Wolff and Byrd's otherworldly clients.

Lash said, "I see this parody of The X-Files as a jumping-off point for lampooning not only UFOlogy but government intervention in people's lives. In fact, it's not so much a parody as a satire on people's beliefs and delusions, whether they're in flying saucers or government efficiency."

The bimonthly title retails for $2.50. Case Files Volume 1, a collection of the first four issues of the series, is also available.

Gladstone

✸ The Carl Barks Library of Donald Duck Adventures in Color #23 will feature stories from Dell's Christmas Parade #9 (1958) and #26 (1959) and Vacation in Duckburg #1025 (1959).

"Christmas in Duckburg" tells of Donald's attempts to evade the Beagle Boys and deliver a 100-foot Christmas tree from Canada to Duckburg's town square. In "The Christmas Cha Cha" Uncle Scrooge has donated a silver bowl as a prize in a Duckburg dance contest but hires a dance teacher to help him win it back. It's Donald and his nephews vs. the Beagle Boys in Disneyland in the last story, "Mastering the Matterhorn." Priced at $8.95, the 52-page title is scheduled to ship Nov. 20. Gladstone no longer maintains these albums on permanent back order.

Image Comics

✸ All of Extreme Studios' male heroes will be transformed into females during November. The story begins in the pages of Youngblood, when female villain Diabolique casts a spell that changes into women all the super-powered men with whom Glory has come in contact.

Extreme Marketing Director Matt Hawkins said, "This is our tribute to the Bad Girl craze that seems to have mesmerized the comics industry during the last year."

Extreme Editor Eric Stephenson added, "One thing we definitely want to get across is that this is not a parody. Even though these scenarios are humorous in nature, the gender-bending is absolutely real to these characters, and each will react differently to the situations they're placed in. This storyline will have long-lasting repercussions in all of our titles, leaving at least one major character as a woman forever."

The titles participating in the event include Bloodstrike, Brigade, Chapel, Glory, Knightmare, NewMen, Prophet, Supreme, and Youngblood.

Marvel Entertainment Group

✸ "One Nation under Doom" collapses in 2099 Apocalypse, a 48-page special featuring all the 2099 characters. The October-shipping issue, written by Warren Ellis and pencilled by Mark Buckingham, sets the stage for "X-Nation" in October's X-Men 2099 #27 and 2099 Genesis, scheduled to ship in November.

One Shot Press

✸ One Shot Press is preparing a title which will serve as a sampler of different independent comics. Called Strictly Independent! The Independent Comic Network, the 32-page, comic-book size, black-and-white magazine is scheduled for a January release but is planned to be available from participating publishers in October.

Independent publishers are expected to pay to have preview pages and promotional material featured in the magazine. Strictly Independent! will also include reviews and interviews focused on "independent publishers."

Interested publishers can send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to One Shot Press, P.O. Box 474, Stafford Springs, CT 06076 for further information.

Scarlet Rose Productions

✸ Writer-artist Francisco Manuel Rosa explores modern life in self-contained stories in each issue of Variations on the Theme, the first series from Scarlet Rose Productions. In issue #1, three stories look at three different shapes the act of confession can take in the modern world. The first issue of the quarterly, 24-page, black-and-white title is scheduled to ship in October. The title retails for $2.75.

Tekno-Comix

✸ At the conclusion of the first six-issue story arc by writer Rick Veitch and penciller Bryan Talbot, Neil Gaiman's Teknophage's creative team will change to writer Paul Jenkins and artist Al Davison. The four-issue story arc by Jenkins and Davison will concern the effects of faith and religion on the planet of Kalighoul.

Teknophage was the first Tekno-Comix title not approved by the Comics Code Authority. Jenkins and Davison said they plan to continue the series' mature themes. Tekno-Comix Editor in Chief Ed Polgardy said, "Jenkins and Davison have a really good handle on the steam-driven inner workings of Kalighoul, and we're all really delighted with the proposal that was submitted by them."

The new team takes over with issue #7, scheduled to ship in October. Talbot and inker Angus McKie will continue to do covers for the series.

The only thing they've got in common is a desire to nab "The Fox," a notorious flouter of traffic laws who drives a highly customized vehicle.

The anime is based on the manga of the same name by Fujishima Kousuke and is scheduled to be released as an English-language comic book from Studio Proteus and Dark Horse Comics. The 25-minute episode will be available with subtitles for $19.95, dubbed into English for $14.95, or as a laserdisc containing both dubbed and subtitled versions for $39.95. Manga Entertainment

✸ Manga Entertainment has opened a video studio in Britain. The new venture, based at Newcastle under Lyme, is a creative-design and production company working on projects for the advertising, television, and music industries, as well as films for Manga Entertainment. The studio recently completed animation sequences featured in U2's video for "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me, Kill Me."

Manga Entertainment Managing Director Andy Frain said, "The studio is geared up for commercials work and television requirements, as well as our own productions. I also believe the quality of the U2 video proves our potential for the music business."

Elvira continues comics-character gig

Elvira has renewed her comic-book publishing agreement with Claypool. The company said Elvira approves every issue of Elvira, Mistress of the Dark and has even contributed story ideas.

Elvira said, "For two years now, Claypool Comics has been putting words in my mouth, and I've never felt so witty or looked so good. Being a comic-book character is great work if you can get it, and Claypool Comics has made working a blast."

Elvira, Mistress of the Dark is on its 27th issue and continues to appear on a monthly schedule. The following is a look at upcoming stories:

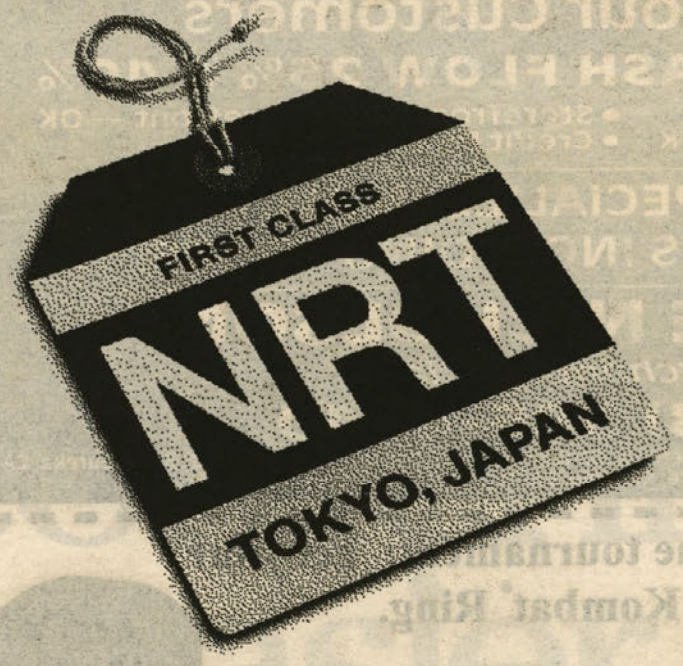
In Elvira #30, the Mistress of the Dark goes to an island location to take part in the annual swimsuit issue photo shoot for a famous illustrated sports magazine and ends up jiggling new life into giant stone heads on the island. "Bikini Island Alien Lovefest '95" is by Frank Strom, Tom Simonton, and Louis Lachance.

In Elvira #31, Elvira is stranded in the desert and encounters giant, radiation-spawned killer ants and Bigfoot. "Your Feet's Too Big" is by Strom, Simonton, and Dan Schaefer.

Elvira #32 evokes shades of Dark Shadows, as Elvira takes a job as a governess to a murderous child of a rich Maine family in "The Curse of Coffinwood" by Richard Howell, Peter Sanderson, James Fry, and Art Viscardi. The backup feature by Strom, John Heebink, and Ricardo Villagran begins "The Perils of Elvira," in which Elvira plays the lead in a jungle action movie.

A vampire shows up at the door of the Coffinwood Mansion in Elvira #33's sequel to the previous month's Dark Shadows parody. "The Night of Dark Houses" is by Howell, Sanderson, Fry, and Viscardi. Also, "The Perils of Elvira" continues.

In Elvira #34, Elvira is initiated into a witches' sorority and an old villain returns. "If You Can't Beat 'em . . ." is by Strom, Simonton, and Lachance. "The Perils of Elvira" continues.



The only other way you can get more manga and anime.

By Maggie Thompson

I am alone to contemplate this morning's headline. It reads, Man Shreds Neighbor in Woodchipper*. I am not certain I need tell you the details of the killing, because what seizes anyone's imagination in this story seized the headline writer's as well. It's that woodchipper. . . .*

Perhaps the most subtle sentence in the entire story is this one: "A woodchipper is a common appliance in contemporary American suburbs meant to handle wood items up to 18 inches in length and 10 inches in diameter." . . .

Moving on, the reader encounters the obligatory quotation from the local constable. He tells us in the charmingly flat prose of the precinct house that "the evidence consists exclusively of fingernail bits and skin flakes found adhered to the leaves of an oak tree by the river behind the house." You have to love this man. "Adhered," he says! As if the word were a term of art in his line of work. And listen to the lyrical flow of those prepositional phrases. ". . . to the leaves of an oak tree by the river behind the house." This is the poetry of the common man. . . .

In the course of contemplating this phantom story, our eyes are pulled back to one word by the policeman. We consider it again: "exclusively." And we realize that the evidence is very, very slight. A mild qualm troubles the morning's reverie. Somewhere in the back of our mind, one lone synapse — confined to a corner of the subconscious so far away from our surface reading of the story that we are scarcely aware — flicks off a single, lambent thought: if only the killer had wheeled the woodchipper a little closer to the water he wouldn't have been caught.

Can it be true? That we wish him to get away with this crime? Of course, it's true! Because what really attracts us to this story — whether we are sitting in our housecoats after breakfast, or catching a paragraph or two at a red light on the way to work, or absorbing the details as we roar along in the common carrier — is the novelty of that damned woodchipper. In some strange way, we wish to reward this man, privately, each to ourselves, with our regret over his loss of liberty for taking an act so wretchedly common these days and endowing it with a certain freshness. I believe there is an entire school of thought that considers such cleverness to be the very soul of genius.

The Perfect Murder (1991)
Jack Hitt

The quotation this week, by the way, appears in a delightful book with the subtitle of "Five Great Mystery Writers Create the Perfect Crime." Lawrence Block, Sarah Caudwell, Tony Hillerman, Peter Lovesey, and Donald E. Westlake pitched in to "advise" a would-be wife-killer how to carry out his project. (How could I pass up this team?)

And the book's opening contained the passage quoted above. This is well worth your attention, if you're a mystery buff. If your interests remain limited to comics, you may still find it thought-provoking, as it applies to villains (and villains as heroes) in our microcosm.

✷ Wolff & Byrd, Counselors of the Macabre #7 (Jun 95, Exhibit A, $2.50) starts slowly but wraps up the third page with captions which should get a reaction out of Swamp Thing fans: "Time is running out. You feel you deserve to be treated better than a garden-variety client . . . for you are Sodd, the thing called It!™

Rants & Raves: Marilyn Monroe

By R.C. Harvey

Marilyn Monroe. There. I said it. But I'm not saying it for the obvious reason — to laminate this column with the kind of show-biz patina that distinguishes other CBG departments. Nope, I'm saying it as a test. I'm saying it to see if it's really illegal to say it. Not exactly illegal, maybe, but the name is apparently not in the public domain.

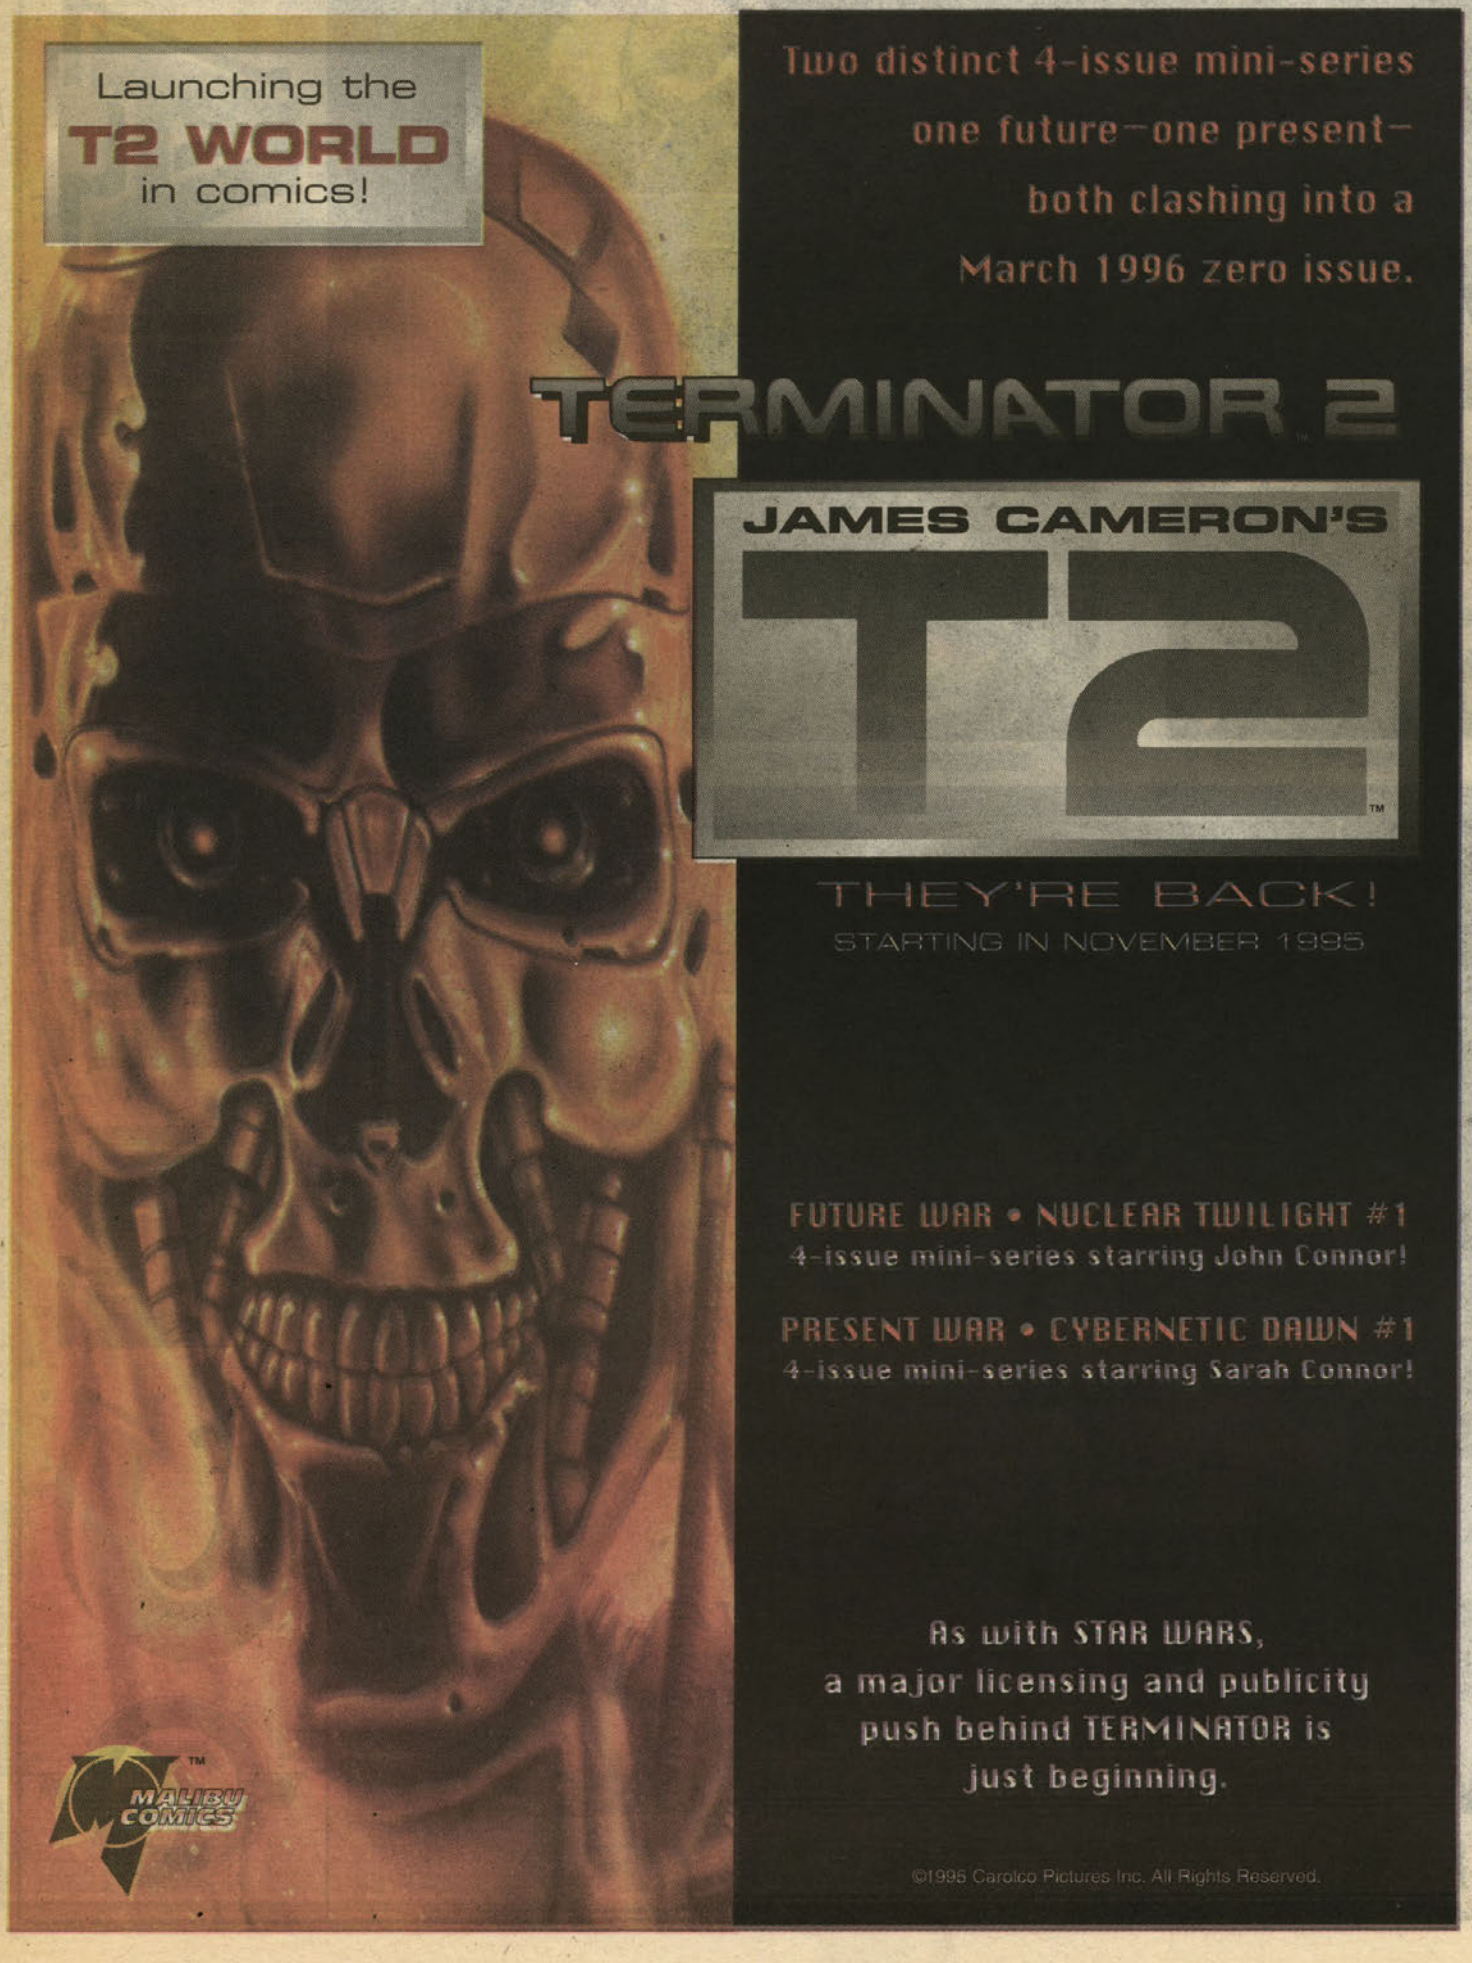
This may come as a shock, but, according to the fine print on the Marilyn Monroe postage stamp, "the name, image, voice, and likeness of Marilyn Monroe are properties of the estate of Marilyn Monroe."

That means, I suppose, that none of us can say "Marilyn Monroe" without paying royalties to the estate.

At this rate, one of the century's most celebrated sex symbols will soon fade from memory. She'll disappear. Talk about your fate worse'n death.

We can't even refer to her as "the person formerly denominated 'Marilyn Monroe.' " No formerly about it. She's still called that, but we can't call her that. Not without paying royalties to the estate.

Well, I guess I'd rather owe 'em than beat 'em out of it.



"But there was a time you were known by another name . . . one you didn't have to trademark. As the minutes tick away toward an uncertain future, you think back . . . and recall your roots . . ." Moan.

These aren't Wolff & Byrd reprints from stuff that's run in CBG, but if you like the CBG material, you should enjoy this.

✷ Generation X #8 (Oct 95, Marvel, $1.95) is another fun issue. The focal point involves the team's tracking down a castle which has disappeared — and there are already a number of subplots and continuing stories. But the scripting is sprightly, the characters appealing, and the art attractive. The letters column carries a letter from someone who has become interested in Marvels again because of this title — and that's understandable.

✷ Emerald Light, an Index and Glossary to Green Lantern 1959-1994 is by Donald D. Ensign, 1120 Buena Vista St., South Pasadena, CA 91030. Price is a total of $11.95 (including postage and handling).

If you're a collector of the character and his many adventures, you're going to find this an incredibly handy volume. Among its features: a publishing schedule for the second and third series, a partial list of GL's appearances in other titles, a selected bibliography, a list (with issue numbers) of creators who worked on GL comics (e.g., Steve Ditko pencilled the GL strip in Action Comics Weekly #642), a glossary (Apros is a round, brown, vegetable-like Green Lantern, the GL of Minus Seven PI, the third, and one of The Guardian's honor guard — and his appearances are listed), a list of members of the Green Lantern Corps, the Green Lantern oath, and more.

✷ Strangers in Paradise #6 (Jul 95, Abstract, black and white, $2.75) is by Terry Moore and is getting better all the time. (And its growing audience is around to tell you it started pretty damned well.)

The plot is thickening, the situation is getting more menacing for several of the characters, and Moore takes time out to do a lovely riff on little-kid behavior in a dream sequence. Want to know what the fuss (two Harvey nominations, four Eisner nominations)is about? Get this. Most stores should be stocking this by now.

✷ Arabian Nights on the World of Magic: The Gathering #1 (of 2) (Dec 95, Valiant/Armada, $2.50) is a story which tries to bring the world of the game into the world of comics and does pretty well. The problem faced by writers Susan Wright and Jeofrey Vita, penciller Alexander Maleev, and inker Rodney Ramos is to tell a story to people who may be (a) devoted Magic players or (b) not want to know anything about the game but want an exotic story.

They manage pretty well, and for the (a) type of readers, there's an analysis at the end of the issue which considers the story in light of rules of the game. I didn't give much of a hoot, being a (b) type or reader — who found the tale a bit confusing for something published as #1 but otherwise well executed, for something which basically has to consist of characters fighting, winning, and going on to the next fight.

✷ Millennium Fever #1 (of 4) (Oct 95, DC/Vertigo, $2.50) is written by Nick Abadzis and drawn by Duncan Fegredo. This is involving, moving, unusual, and not for kids.

I'm not sure where the story is going, but there is a fantasy element (maybe a major one — judging from the final page of this installment) to this story of a black teen looking for his first romance. It's richly told, intriguing, occasionally revolting, and strongly convincing in its picture of adolescent agonizing. And more.

✷ The Ersatz Peach (July 1995, Aeon, b&w trade paperback, $7.95) does contain material by Desert Peach writer-artist Donna Barr — but what it is is an anthology of different creators' takes on the character. So if you're a Teri S. Wood or Daniel Pinkwater completist, for example, you're going to want this, too.

What you probably need to have brought to your attention, if you still don't know the Peach after all this time, is that he's a character of sufficient complexity to have produced this kind of response from the creative community.

✷ Legionnaires #30 (Oct 95, DC, $2.25) is co-plotted by Tom McCraw and Tom Peyer, pencilled by Jeffrey Moy, and inked by W.C. Carani — and long-time fans who recall turning points in Lightning Lad's life will get a sense of déjà vu at this well-told episode.

My favorite Legion story has been the origin of the clubhouse, ever since that tale was told; aside from that, I've never been a Legion buff. That's the sort of announcement that needs to be made upfront with any Legion review. But I thought this was both well-written and well-drawn. (Oh, and there's a story element here that's setting up for some important Legion — and, maybe, Super — events to come. Keep an eye on this title.)

✷ I just realized I haven't yet reviewed Astro City — wups! — Kurt Busiek's Astro City (that should foul up people looking for it in indexes and price guides) #1 (Aug 95, Image, $2.25). CBG has carried two cover stories about it, but the story written by Kurt Busiek and drawn by Brent Anderson (with cover and character design by Alex Ross) hasn't been covered in Comics Guide.

Remember how Alan Moore used to handle some character who'd been featured in a gazillion stories? He'd take the super-hero as if he were a sofa pillow and he'd shake him and air him out and fluff him and replace him on the sofa where he'd been before. But now he was fresh and attractive — and you found he brightened the spot instead of simply filling his habitual space. (Whuf. That simile got a little labored. Sorry.)

What Kurt has done in Astro City is take tried-and-true super-hero formulas and do fresh things with them. In this first issue, he takes a swift, powerful, flying man — and takes us through his day. "There's never any time." That's the nightmare of this super-being. Whether he's a journalist on deadline or a member of a squabbling super-team, he constantly fights the clock — and Busiek conveys that burden.

But it's fun and fresh. Visit Astro City for yourself and get a new view of some old standards.

Gallery shows Ausgang art

The Bess Cutler Gallery in New York City will present an exhibition of Anthony Ausgang's acrylic paintings of anthropomorphic cartoon characters and thrift-store paintings Sept. 8-30. Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Exhibition shows art from Sandman's 'Wake'

Four Color Images will present art by Michael Zulli from "The Wake" storyline in Sandman from Sept. 15 to Oct. 31. For the first time in the gallery's history, the art will be presented in its pencilled form, without inks.

Gallery co-owner Laura Sanzel said, "Michael's pencils are not only beautiful, but informative about the comics art process. By seeing the penciller's work uninked, you get a strong idea of how much the art is transformed in the inking. It's like discovering an entirely new artistic discipline."

The show will consist mainly of selected pieces from the three-issue story arc, but will include some promotional and ancillary pieces. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday noon to 5:30 p.m.

'Emma' comes to Greenville

Lohman Hills Press will present several works from the traveling Evolution of Emma visual arts display at the first annual Greenville Comic Book Convention in Greenville, S.C., Sept. 23. The display will also include original art from the Emma strip appearing in Comics Buyer's Guide and copies of the Emma comic book. Emma will also be featured on the convention T-shirt, along with Bill Neville's rendition of The Tick.

Emma creators Richie and Gina Prosch will be at the show, as well as Neville and Elfquest artist and Explorers co-creator Terry Collins. Organized by Robert Young and sponsored by Little Caesars Pizza, the Greenville show will be held at the Howard Johnson hotel on Laurens Road at I-85 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call (803) 271-1107.

Gertler starts creator-owned titles

Nat Gertler has targeted Anchorage, Alaska, for a comics-signing tour, promoting three new creator-owned projects. The upcoming projects include Mister U.S.: 50 Forgotten Years, Violence Dogood, and "The Factor."

Mister U.S.: 50 Forgotten Years is a satirical one-shot that looks at the changing style of super-hero comics. Done in a mock documentary style, the series shows the origin of patriotic hero Mr. U.S, as it would have been told during six periods in comics history. Penciller Mark Lewis and inker Jeff Meyer adopt a variety of styles, as the series progresses. The black-and-white title ships in December from Eyeful Press.

Violence Dogood is an issues-oriented vigilante series with art by Adam Rex, scheduled to run in four parts in the first half of 1996, also from Eyeful Press.

"The Factor," scheduled for issues #28 through #30 of Negative Burn, is a super-hero series in which the super-hero never appears. Each episode is a self-contained story about the effects of the super-hero on the people around him.

Gertler will appear at a Bosco's comic-book store Sept. 23 to discuss his projects and sign titles he has written, including Elfquest, Blood Syndicate, and Zen Intergalactic Ninja.

Gertler said, "There are so many creators competing for customers that it is hard to get any real attention. However, the 49th state is isolated, and creator appearances up there are rare at best."

Company aims to keep retailers on track

By Keith Colvin
PACER Vice President

Nonmember retailers I talk with invariably have the same questions and comments about the Professional Association of Comics Entertainment Retailers. The two most common besides "why should I join?" are:

1. Why have you hired a management company?

2. If you guys are around in six months, I will join.

To answer the first, let's look back to a year ago this week. Pat Bower from Time Warp Comics had had enough. Pat understood that the retailers' collective bus was stalled in the middle lane just before a giant clover leaf. One leaf leads to the road of ruin, one to the road of profitability. Pat was not willing to sit in the bus and watch out the window, as industry change after industry change whizzed by at breakneck speed. More importantly, Pat realized that, if comics retailers could just refuel, tune up, and get some good directions, they could all enjoy a smoother, safer, and more comfortable ride on that road to profitability.

Pat Bower, correctly in my opinion, surmised that the existing national trade organization had outlived or outgrown its usefulness. She pointed out how past efforts had flourished — then, eventually, floundered because of the nature of their organization. In the past, retailer organizations were run by volunteers. Most followed the same cycle: Local retailers get organized by one or more local brethren, form, meet, and, over a period of time, burn out. If your organization is fortunate, another retailer catches fire, as the current leader flames out. But, as Pat found out, usually, you run out of members before you get where you intended to go.

Pat was the president of her local Comic Book Retailers International chapter and was flaming out. She started to look around at other retailer organizations to see how they overcame this phenomenon. She looked to another organization she knew of: ASTRA (the retailer organization for toy specialty stores). It avoided crashing by hiring a management company to take care of the day-to-day running of the organization. The management company, she found, was always available, could immediately respond to new membership requests, organize meetings, send mailings, send press releases, and make sure their newsletter went out on time. More importantly, they could not and would not blow off or forget a project, while volunteers may become distracted when the new comics order is late, an employee has quit, or that Damien customer has been tormenting them.

At ASTRA, Pat found Diversified Management (DMS) and she struck upon an idea. If toy stores could hire a management company, so could comics stores. Here is the whole point. Comic retailers, like any small businesses, have their hands full being entrepreneurs. It only makes sense to hire someone to help keep you on the straight and narrow.

DMS keeps the everyday things off our backs, so we can organize, advocate, and move forward. Among other things DMS is important in keeping us timely, productive, and following our by-laws. Some retailers ask me, "Why do you use DMS? Couldn't we just do all that stuff ourselves? We could do it and save the money." Short-term, maybe, but in the long term, members need to run their retail businesses and not use valuable time and resources on the phone looking for meeting space or pasting up newsletters.

We do not need a management company to be professional. But we do need one to stay professional. Comics retailers could do for themselves what DMS does. Comics retailers could also do their own taxes without the advice or expertise of a CPA. Neither one is an especially bright idea.

As for waiting to see if the association will last, let me say that PACER is still here. We have a burgeoning cross-section of comics specialty stores. Most major publishers and the three top distributors are dues-paying members. At the San Diego Comic-Con, we provided focus groups to anyone in the industry who asked and we have hard-working members in committees evaluating benefit packages, business seminars, and more.

The only other place you might find a Starchild.

Capital City Distribution is proud to announce that another in our series of strategic alliances, this time with Coppervale Press, takes effect with titles shipping in November. Coppervale is the publisher of the skyrocketing series Starchild. ➢ Founded in 1992 by James Owen as Taliesin Press, Coppervale is one of the pioneers in the rapidly growing Fantasy Literature category. Indeed, their Starchild series has quadrupled in sales. In November, Coppervale will debut a four-issue miniseries, Starchild: Crossroads, and in December will release their first full-color special, Starchild: Fool's Hollow. ➢ Even more exciting is the news that the first chapters of Starchild are being discussed as a live-action feature film and that Starchild: Fool's Hollow is being explored as an animated series. ➢ Coppervale Press is a leader in a genre that is bridging the gap between comics and literature. We're very proud they chose an exclusive alliance with Capital City Distribution, and together we look forward to bringing you much more fine fantasy literature.

ROBERT BEERBOHM COMIC ART

P.O. Box 507, Fremont, Nebraska 68025 • Phone 1-402-721-8848

The summer convention circuit is over (whew!) for another year. With this advert I offer a nice assortment of collectible comic books that I enjoy to deal in.

Enclose $13 for overnight delivery, your choice of FedEx or the Post Office. Second Day Air (Priority) is $5.00 (includes insurance) if you are ordering half a dozen books or so.

All items securley wrapped and are guaranteed "you like'em" or your money is cheerfully refunded as customer satisfaction has always been important here.

I had been on the road since late April. If we have unfinished business, please do not hesitate to get ahold of me now. I am in town for a while working on Comic Book Store Wars and it is possible a few letters "fell in the cracks" as it were. I value everybody's business and some things can get overlooked when one is gone for an extended time period. This year marks thirty years of comics fandom for me.

Thanks again to the many hundreds of people I spoke with regarding the comics business history tome I am compiling. I have picked up lots of new data, photos, zines, etc to sort through and fit into its proper place in history. If you have a story to tell, please, by all means, send it in.

WE BUY & TRADE FOR OLDER COMICS MATERIAL LIKE YOU SEE IN THESE PAGES. THE MORE OBSCURE, THE BETTER, AS WELL AS THE "MAINSTREAM".

COMIC BOOK STORE WARS UPDATE

Here are some highlights that I thought I might pass on to you:

1) The earliest usage of the term "funny book" dates to 1908.
2) The first usage of the term "comic book" dates to 1917.
3) I will be showing with photographs that "comics fandom" can be dated to 1923.
4) The earliest comics fanzine dates to 1936.
5) The earliest advertisement wanting to deal comic books is from 1937. (so far)
6) The first comic book store opened its doors in 1942. I have four different print ads I can show.
7) The first comic fanzine about comics dates to 1947. Articles as well as ads.
8) The first industry support magazine for comics retailers had its first special issue in 1947 as well.
9) President Truman used a comic book as his official Presidential Bid media vehicle to explain who he was as well as what he stood for back in 1948. Millions were made, few survive.
10) The comics spinner rack underwent its final incarnation in 1953 ending up with the standard 50 pockets we know today.

Work proceeds well on the research of a history of the business of comics. ONe hundred years of comics merchandising is being examined and collated to show the world that comics have had a rich tradition of social integration up until 1955 when an "excorcism" of sorts occurred.

I am still seeking your involvment in the world of comics. Many hundreds have responded with old "war" stories re their love of the medium.

Photos, news clippings (xerox more than fine), fliers of early stores are wanted as are early dealers lists and adzines.

WANTED BY THIS COLLECTOR

I trade for Yellow Kid items (pre World War One only) as well as most any comic book from before 1933s standard format became the norm. Am especially looking for pre World War One "large size" early comics reprint books like the Katzenjammer Kids, Happy Hooligan, Buster Brown, etc. All odd ball sizes Cupples & Leon 1907-1933. Call and propose a concept. These are wanted as research for Comic Book Store Wars.

JOHN HAUSER'S COMIC AUCTION

PO Box 51673, New Berlin, WI 53151
(414) 789-1863 • 9 am - 9pm CST
ENDS Saturday September 30.

The following books are all from the provence of Frank Buss. These books have been stored in an attic for 50 years. Frank wrote his name in pencil on the front cover of many of the books. The pages of these books are generally white with no tanning. Some slight transfer stains can sometimes be seen on the inside cover. Some books have water stains. There is no tape on any of these books. These books are all from 1937-1942.

According to the Overstreet Price Guide many of these books are extremely scarce with fewer than 250 copies surviving. This is a rare opportunity to own some truly historic books.

COMICS TRADER:

This is an area reserved for the advertiser who wants no-frills advertising with a price to match. $36.00 buys one of the 12 equal spaces on a Comics Trader page. These spaces can be bought in any multiple of the $36.00 unit (maximum 6 units per page). We'll reduce the ad and handle all the production - just design your ad on an 8½ x 8½ space and send it with payment. Remember to keep your design simple so your ad will be readable when reduced.

Super Traders should be typed on an 8½" x 11" sheet of paper which will be reduced to fit a ¼ page space. Each Super Trader costs $102.00 - limit 2 Super Traders per page.

COLLECTOR'S SHOWCASE:

This cost-efficient format in COMIC BUYER'S GUIDE offers you typeset space at a discount. Collector's Showcase units are approximately business card size. You may buy as many units as you want for an ad at cost of $25.00 per box. All typesetting, photos, art, borders and logos are done by Krause Publications and are included in the price.

CLASSIFIED WORD ADS:

Yes, kiddies, it's time for another ripping installment of:

Useless Stories

There's some discussion here and there about the in-development feature film of The Incredible Hulk. And I've had quite a few folks ask me if I'm connected with it in any way.

The answer is: No.

But I tried.

I went to a pitch session for it some time back, met with the producers, gave 'em my strongest sell. They said they wanted to do something that would center on The Hulk's origin, so that's what I gave them. I even came armed with a complete beat-by-beat outline that I did on spec. The result was a sales pitch so well received that they promptly decided to go with someone else.

I never got paid for it. But, since I'm going on vacation next week, I thought I'd offer you a story about a mythical Big Green Guy and share it with you:

The Big Green Guy Movie

Summary:

Sometimes a volcano becomes stoppered.

The lava, unable to vent or escape, simply bubbles and boils. The pressure builds up, becomes more and more intense.

Eventually, the volcano simply explodes. There's nothing left except a huge crater to mark the spot where once had been a seething mountain of power.

There was once a young boy named Bruce Bixby, whose childhood was one of abuse and fear. One hideous night — a night that ended in the loss of the dearest thing in his world — he witnessed the fatal culmination of what a lifetime filled with violence could lead to.

So he bottled up all the anger he felt, all the frustration, all the hostility — all the things that ultimately, he believed, led to death and destruction — and shoved them far down into himself, where he wouldn't have to deal with them.

But as he grew up, and appeared to the outside world as a hardworking, brilliant scientist — inside, all that anger bubbled and boiled, like lava. It acquired a life of its own. Psychiatrists call it Multiple Personality Disorder. In such cases, when those other personalities eventually surface, psychiatrists have noted in many instances actual, inexplicable physical changes. The new incarnations can be taller, wider — stronger.

Bruce was a prime candidate for MPD. Because of his iron discipline, he was able to keep things internalized for longer than most. However, he was still an accident waiting to happen.

And eventually, on the plains of a Nevada tasting ground, the accident did happen. The psychological problem was given physical form, and, when the dust of the volcano called Bruce Bixby cleared, it left something more than a crater. It left a physical incarnation of anger and rage called — The Big Green Guy.

Breakdown:

1) Open with a black screen, over which we run the credits. As we run them, we hear a slow, double-hammered pounding — soft and steady at first, but becoming progressively louder and progressively faster.

We think that it's a heartbeat. And then the blackness, as we pull back, is revealed to be the pupil of an eye — an eye in the head of Snapper Smith. He is seated on a floor, his back against a large steel vault door. His eyes are wide open, and he is clearly petrified. And we realize that the thudding is not a heart (although it might have been Snapper's own heart pounding) but, in fact, two massive fists pounding rhythmically on the door.

Finally, Snapper can't take it any more. "Stop iiiitttttt!" screams Snapper, slamming his hands over his ears. "Stoppppp itttttt!"

And the slamming stops. Snapper can't believe it. He approaches slowly, cautiously. Then he whispers, "Bruce?"

And then there is a massive thud, sending Snapper jumping back with a startled yell. Then he gapes in astonishment and slowly moves towards the door, to reveal an outward indentation has been made. The lines suggest the fingers of an immense fist.

Moments later, Snapper is seated in front of a video camera, recording the time and date, explaining that Bruce has told him to make a video record of everything that happens, as it happens. Snapper looks back at the indentation and then says, "Just in case this tape is found and none of us lives long enough to fill in the gaps — here's everything from the start —"

That should enable us to hit the ground running. We will also cut back to Snapper every now and then, to keep both him and The Big Green Guy as constant presences in the film, even when doing character development on the others.

2) We meet Dr. Bruce Bixby, giving a presentation at a scientific symposium on his newest creation: The Gamma Bomb. The modern approach to war is to try to destroy installations from the air and harm as few people as possible.

What Bixby has done with The Gamma Bomb is invert The Neutron Bomb — in essence, the Gamma Bomb destroys high-density inanimate objects (brick, metal) and does not harm human beings, at least in theory. It still needs to be tested and built.

He mentions that there are reports that, when Russia was still the USSR, its scientists were also experimenting with gamma radiation and its possibilities as a weapon, but supposedly their experiments went awry and were finally shut down. Bixby, however, believes he's ironed out the problems.

After Bixby's presentation, he is approached by Major Glenn Talcum and Liz Hubbard, whom Talcum introduces as his fiancée. They have dinner together, and Talcum informs Bixby that the army would be interested in supporting Bixby's work. Bixby has resisted overtures from the army before, because the army epitomizes violence, which he himself abhors.

Liz is key, though, in convincing Bixby to go along. She's spent her whole life as an army brat but has just graduated from Bryn Mawr and convinces Bixby that this is precisely the sort of thing that can turn the army into what it should be: a force to help people, rather than hurt them.

Bixby agrees to it.

3) Bixby meets with his psychiatrist, Dr. Larry Delilah — an old friend he's been seeing on a consulting basis because of some disturbing dreams he's been having lately, ever since his father passed away months ago.

His dreams of violence and anger stem from a period in his childhood which he has largely blanked out but which involves the auto accident that killed his mother — a woman he remembers only dimly (which is odd, considering he was 10 when she died).

Bixby informs Larry that he's happy about developments and also, he admits, he's taken with Liz. Larry tells Bruce he hopes that this will be the start of Bruce's actually showing sparks of emotion — the start of his letting down his hair, as it were, since he's usually wrapped so tight. Bruce says he's always been that way: He didn't even cry when his mother died.

4) A private moment with Talcum and Liz: He compliments her on the clever ploys she used to get Bixby on board and is distressed to learn that she meant everything she said. He and Liz have known each other since they were kids, and this is a turnaround in her attitudes. She'd been as much of a hawk as he. It's disturbing to him, and it'll sure be disturbing to her dad.

5) We meet Lightning Hubbard, an old-line blood-and-guts military type, whose idea of warfare is that you get in there and slug it out with the enemy face-to-face. That's the way real men fight. He also, however, obeys orders, and Washington wants to see The Gamma Bomb happen, which means he wants to see it happen.

6) Work on the bomb begins at a secret location in Nevada. Liz shows Bruce around, including one of her favorite secret hideaways when she was a kid — a nuclear bomb shelter hidden underground in the middle of the desert.

7) In a secret location, a man named Emil has a meeting with the notorious spy-master known only as The Headguy. Cloaked in shadow, The Headguy wishes to know Emil's business. Emil (who was present at the meeting) represents a consortium of individuals who are concerned about this newly announced Gamma Bomb. They are interested in making sure that it does not come to fruition.

He wants Bixby disposed of. The Headguy replies that that is not a good idea — that his work might be continued by others. No, far preferable to make sure that the tests are sabotaged instead. And he has just the man for the job.

8) Work on the bomb continues. Liz and Bruce are getting friendly, to the annoyance of Talcum and Hubbard. Bruce works hard in company with his lab assistant, Igor.

9) Liz and Bruce sneak off the base into town, and Liz talks Bruce into going to a bar for some drinks. There, Bruce runs afoul of a local tough, who starts shoving him around. Bruce clearly wants to blow his temper completely, to lash out at the guy, but he bottles it up. And he would probably get his teeth kicked in, if not for a young hotshot teenager named Snapper Smith (urged by his date, Marlo, to "do something!").

Smith does so, deflecting the tough's wrath with humor. Consequently, he saves Bruce from being taken apart. On one hand, Bruce is grateful; on the other hand, he feels that he has been humiliated in Liz's eyes.

Back at the base, there's a knock on Glenn Talcum's door — and a shadowy figure says to Talcum, "There's something about Bruce Bixby that you should know."

Talcum, curious, steps out into the night.

10) Bruce awakens that night, haunted by the dreams again, more clear than ever this time. They are of his father, Brian, whose violent and drunken nature one night —

He wakes up before he can fully recall the rest. He calls Delilah but hangs up without saying a word.

Meantime, Liz is concerned because Talcum has started acting distant and cold.

11) It's a shot of the bar, as Snapper, the tough, and a bunch of drinking buddies speculate about what's going on over at that testing range. The tough guy challenges Snapper to try to find out what the story is, putting down a hefty bet. Snapper agrees.

12) It's the fateful Gamma Bomb test. Two bombs have been constructed — one is being tested.

Bruce sees Snapper out on the testing range. Theoretically, he should be OK, but this is still a test, and nothing is sure.

Bruce heads out to get him, instructing that the countdown be halted until he's back.

13) In the computer core, Igor sabotages it so that the countdown progresses, unstoppable. Not only that, but the frantic project scientists discover that the bomb isn't building up to the correct detonation. Readings are off the scale, with the gamma mix way out of whack.

14) The bomb goes off. But, then, you knew that.

15) Bixby and Snapper are put under observation to make sure there are no ill effects. There don't seem to be any. Snapper and Bixby have a lengthy, get-to-know-you discussion.

16) That night, however, Bixby — falling asleep fitfully in his clothes — dreams once more of his childhood. This time, he gets the whole picture: his father, drunken and angry, chasing his mother.

She jumps into the car, young Bruce jumping in with her. The father chases them, howling his fury. As his mother shoots into the street, Bruce's father manages to yank Bruce out through the window of the car.

His mom slams on the brakes — and a truck smashes into the car, totalling it and her.

And Bruce's father terrorizes him into leaving out his own involvement.

Bixby wakes up, roaring.

THE Bruce Hamilton COMPANY

Congratulations to BUD PLANT
on his 25th ANNIVERSARY in the Business!

I first met Bud Plant nearly 25 years ago in November of 1970 when he showed up unexpectedly at a convention I was putting on in Scottsdale, Arizona.

It was my first convention (one of only two I ever did). We rented a small showroom at the Ramada across the street from where I lived. The room had the space for twelve tables and just before the show opened I'd sold the last one, mostly to dealers from California such as Terry Stroud and Irving and Larry Bigman. I was feeling pretty good because we'd gotten lots of free publicity in papers and on television locally and I expected a respectable turnout.

Minutes before we opened our doors a truck pulled up and a long-haired teenager got out. It was Bud Plant, who had driven in from an all-nighter that the very young will do and he wanted to buy six tables! He had one or two helpers with him and was ready to unload many, many boxes.

I panicked because I didn't know you were supposed to allow for people buying tables at the door in those days. The situation was resolved, however, when I was able to get an additional room across the hallway.

Midway through the first day the hotel threatened to close us down because of some undergrounds Bud was selling. I don't remember exactly how that was resolved, but Bud stayed, the convention went on and we enjoyed attendance close to 200.

Twenty-five years later Bud's still selling lots of stuff even though no longer a teenager.

In 1971 or 1972 at San Diego I arrived after doing an all-nighter myself and showed up with a staggering assortment of Golden Age comics, many of which most collectors had never seen: six copies of Captain America #1, multiples of each of the first ten issues of Superman, etc. Everybody abandoned their tables to crowd around ours while we unpacked, the word having travelled through the room like wildfire. Other dealers left their tables. It was pandemonium!

One of my fondest memories of that San Diego convention was seeing Bud Plant standing on top of the dealer's table opposite ours to wave hello above the impenetrable wall of bodies crushed around us.

To Bud: you've come a long way, baby! Congratulations! Keep it up for another twenty five!

Sincerely,

Bruce Hamilton
